The Senior Class

HE CLASS OF '26 is but six in number. Out of the thirteen who started their College Course in 1922 seven have gone to other callings. Three of the number heeding the call of God went to join the priesthood.

In the year 1922, through the instrumentality of Father O'Shea, then President of the College, and Father Coudeyre, Perfect of Studies, it was decided to reopen the College of Liberal Arts in Seattle. It was necessary to get enough students in the course to make possible the acquisition of teachers for the various branches. These were recruited from the high school graduating class of that year and three former students who had gone to pursue higher knowledge at Gonzaga University. When the course opened in the fall, seventeen were enrolled, three sophomores and thirteen freshmen.

The school term started auspiciously under the tutelage of Rev. Father O'Shea, Mr. Dunne, Mr. Semeria, and Mr. Maginnis. Though a small class, it was enthusiastic and through the earnest co-operation of the students and teachers the year proved very successful. The class progressed rapidly in the important branch of philosophy due mostly to the excellent attention given the pupils by Father O'Shea and his enthusiastic interest in the embryonic College Course.

In athletics too, the class was not backward. Football was in the air at the start of the term and they responded with great zest to the call of the noble sport, placing five men on the team. In basketball and baseball the class produced their share of the material for winning teams.

No school is complete without various activities that go to make up the bright side of the scholastic year. Genuine, earnest work on the school paper, dramatics, and the like with their corresponding successes tend to produce a more active interest in the dry school work. The new collegians plunged into the work of putting out the school publication, the "Palestra." Bertrand Curran was appointed editor and through his endeavor and the help of the other members of the class the paper was placed on a sound basis. The school annual was revived and christened the "Echo." It proved to be as much of a success as the "Palestra" had been and became an active chronicler of the year's events.

Though a class distinct in themselves, the three sophomores were united by the common bonds of the classroom with the freshmen and as such were but one class in activities. For this reason the College Club was not started until the following year, when new blood was introduced into the College Department by the graduating class from High School. The class of '26 became actively interested in this organization and helped much to promote its early success.

Father O'Shea had dreamed of having a full college course of four years, but until this time there seemed little chance of Seattle College becoming more than a Junior College. However, so many of the students showed intention of returning and there was such a promising Freshman Class coming up that his dream was realized and the full course of four years was instituted.

The class of '26 were now Juniors and with Mr. Semeria as their principal teacher they progressed rapidly in their higher work. The "Palestra" and "Echo" flourished and much work was put in on these publications by the class.

And now we find the class in the last year of their College Course. Scholastic work takes much of their time, for it is important that the last year be kept up to the same high standard as the preceding years. They have added much to the store of their knowledge: this was due mostly to the excellent work of the faculty and the Jesuit system of education.

But as all things must have an end, so it is with education and the many happy days spent at school. Now the work of living starts for the erstwhile students, and we have an opportunity of putting into practice the many lofty principles we learned while in the sacred halls of learning at Seattle College.

A Letter to an Old Grad

My Dear Pal:

Although I am a strong advocate of the idea that letters should be heart-to-heart talks and not simply carriers of news items, still, in reply to your many inquiries about Seattle College happenings during the school year 1925-1926, I am going to try to make this letter a detailed chronicle of all the events that occurred at school during the past year.

In the first place, the faculty underwent a complete change during the vacation of 1925, and when we returned to school, there did not remain a single one of the Fathers who had been with us during the previous year. Fr. Boland, S. J., had replaced Fr. O'Shea, S. J., as Rector, and Frs. Coudeyre, Mullen, Vasta, T. Driscoll, White, Stack and Van Hoo-missen had replaced Frs. Busch, Smith, Sullivan, Bennett, Deignan, W. Driscoll and Jetté. Among the scholastics we missed the familiar faces of Messrs. Dunne, Semeria, Falvey and Flynn, but Messrs. Kane, Mifsud and Madigan were on hand to take their places.

The opening days of school found the enrollment slightly increased, especially in the college department and in the first-year of high school. With the advent of the long-looked-for athletic coach in the person of Mr. Tom Berry, everything pointed to a banner year in every possible line.

Football season was opened in grand style with the Varsity holding their practice at Washington Park and the Preps cavorting around the home stamping grounds. The season's success cannot be judged from the victories which the team won, for they were laboring under the difficulties concomitant with a new coaching system, and they were contending against teams like Bellingham Normal, Columbia, Mt. Angel, and St. Martin's, which had formerly been considered far superior to us in football. The Junior football squad showed a world of promise, and their season may be considered a big success, as they trounced their new rivals, the O'Dea High team. Frank Scherman, Ed McClain, Ray O'Hearn, Tubby Meade and Hash O'Neill were very pleasant surprises to all.

The steady routine of the school year was now going on and activities were humming on all sides. Two interclass football contests were staged in the Preparatory Department, with the Senior Preps running away with each. Drives were made in getting ads and subscriptions for the Palestra, and in selling tickets for the big home games and the enthusiasm displayed was gratifying. Then came the retreat given by Rev. P. J. O'

Reilly, S. J., and with it came a quiet and a calmness so noticeable in the busy, active school life.

The Pre-Christmas play took the form of a Minstrel Show and the talent displayed surprised even the most sanguine. The school gave wonderful support to the production and helped to make it a financial success. Among the Minstrel luminaries were Don Moore on the accordion, Syl O'Donnell as interlocutor, Taylor and G. Egan in vocal numbers, Parolik on the violin, Reaney in the Charleston, Coffey in humorous recitations, and the endmen, L. Barton, Marlotte, A. Duffy, Montgomery, Monohan and Murphy.

On the eighth of December, the customary Sodality reception was held, but this year, through the kindness of Fr. Boland, the ceremonies were had on a far more elaborate scale. The two High School Sodalities have had a very successful and profitable year, and the members are to be congratulated on the example they have given to the rest of the school. Frank Dugan and Tally Carroll were Prefects for the Senior and Junior Sodalities, respectively.

With Christmas came College Night, and the usual hurry and bustle in each class to prepare a winning stunt. Most of the classes had very little time to prepare, on account of the Minstrel Classic, which had occurred but a few days before. Third High "B" walked away with the honors by presenting in pantomime "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."

After Christmas came the repetitions and the customary worry about mid-year exams, and then came the wonder basketball season. The hoop men, with such stars as Jim Logan, Eddie Butler, Capt. T. Duffy, Ed O'Connor, Krauczunas, Earl Doyle and Norm McKay, went through a most successful season, winning the Oregon-Washington Conference championship, and decisively trimming such teams as Hall's Business College, Willamette and the University of British Columbia. Great credit is due to Coach Berry, to Manager Egan and to the entire student body for co-operating in making this basketball season a record one.

When speaking of the Varsity hoop team, we must not forget the High School basket artists, who easily defeated their rivals from St. Leo's and from O'Dea High. Alex Cain, Denny McLaughlin, Jerry Evoy, and Emmett Harrington were the shining lights on this team. Besides the Varsity and High School teams there were also Junior and Midget teams, and among these latter there are some very promising young hoopsters. Through the kindness of the Knights of Columbus, their gymnasium was used both for Varsity practice and for all big games.

The same old excitement was also displayed in the interclass basketball tournament, but Fourth High walked away with the Silver Cup, with Second High their only real threat. The Senior Preps, led by Ray O'Hearn also captured the Interclass indoor championship.

Next came the Elocution Contest, and this year the competition seemed to be keener than ever. Several Fourth High elocutionists, who came very close to the medal in the preceding years were bent on getting it on this their last opportunity. But Dame Fortune settled their little strife by smiling on a lowly Prep Sophomore, Tally Carroll. Alex Cain was given second place and Ted Parolik third. Tally Carroll also represented the High School in the National Oratorical Contest and succeeded in defeating five of the large public high schools.

Speaking of the Elocution Contest reminds us of the High School debating team, which has won fame for the school by staging many public debates and with no little eclat. Jack Taylor, Ed Brandmeier, Jerry Haughian, Paul Malone, John Burns and Bud Reaney were among the best forensic talent.

The balmy days of spring had scarce appeared when the click of the bat and the happy thrill of the National Game were in evidence. Though baseball season is still young, yet the Varsity has chalked up a five-to-one victory over St. Martin's, the Prep team has brought home a sixteen-to-one win over O'Dea High, and the Midget team bids fair to vanquish all comers.

Other student activities have been running along smoothly and have done their usual amount of good. The wonderfully equipped library has been more frequented this year than ever, and even though it was enlarged early in the year, it could hardly hold the large crowds that packed it on rainy days. The orchestra has played more in public this year than ever before, and even performed several times over Seattle's largest radio stations. C. J. Bras, T. Parolik and Ken McMullen are the outstanding musicians. Then there is the Mission Crusade, which has become a live-wire organization under the active and capable direction of Archie Richardson.

But I must close my newsy letter now, as the Commencement is upon us and the editor is rushing me. There will be some sad hearts on Graduation Day, as we shall hate to lose the wonderful fellows who are in the Senior classes. But this parting will not be so hard, old pal, if all the grads will follow your example in steadily increasing their loyalty and love for their dear old Alma Mater.

Your old schoolmate,

A LOYAL COLLEGIAN.

Farewell

Mountains steep and peaks appalling
Void of pathways, void of light
Loomed before me in my calling
Up the hill to wisdom's height.
Joy, with all its tinselled treasure,
Home and love and peaceful rest,
Cherished comforts without measure,—
All I left in learning's quest.

As I scaled the jagged mountain
Trembling o'er a deep abyss,
Waters bubbling from a fountain
Brought me hope and peace and bliss.
There I stood 'twixt awe and gladness,
Gleams and glooms shot through my mind;
Thoughts of failure whispered sadness;
Still my heart for learning pined.

Braving dangers on my journey,
Up the precipice I climb;
Now, the path is rough and thorny,
Now, it scents of fragrant thyme.
As I win my destination
Greater grandeurs meet my eyes;
Peaks of higher elevation
Offer me a fairer prize.

Friends and comrades, true through College,
I shall leave with coming dawn;
Glinting lights from peaks of knowledge
Beckon onward, ever on.
As I contemplate the morrow,
Heart and mind with raptures swell,
Yet I feel a touch of sorrow
As I bid a fond farewell.

The High School Graduates

 IN THIS night of June 10th, the closing curtain rings down upon the drama of high school life for the graduating class of 1926. It rings down, as it were, upon the most endearing and well spent years of each graduate's career. These young men are about to be launched upon the turbulent sea of life, and may it well be expected that the training received during these four years just passed will shine forth as a beacon light across the waves, beckoning them ever onward.

It was immediately after the close of the summer vacation of 1922 that some seventy boys, graduates of different grammar schools of the city, enrolled as students in the first year of high school.

The class, because of its size, was divided into two sections; the larger boys, composing one half of the registering number, were placed in division "B" with Mr. Quevedo, S. J., as their teacher. The smaller boys were placed in division "A" under the tutelage of Mr. Edward J. Coen.

After a very busy and successful year the classes were advanced to second year high; the "B" division being taught by Mr. Flynn, S. J., and division "A" being guided by Mr. King, S. J. As during the previous year the classes made great progress, both along scholastic and other lines of school activity.

At the beginning of the third year, the classes, according to the custom of former years, were consolidated into one, with Mr. King, S. J., as instructor. In November, however, the increasing size of the class necessitated a division into the two former sections, Mr. Flynn, S. J., taking over the reins in division "B", while Mr. King, S. J., remained at the helm of division "A".

Again at the beginning of this, the final year, the two classes were merged into one, and for its teacher had Mr. King, S. J., who from his experience with the same boys for the two years preceding, was able to do much towards putting the finishing touches to their high school education.

So much for the events of the classroom. Outside the class has been equally successful in bringing honor to itself and to its Alma Mater. In dramatics, many of its members have shown remarkable ability, and during the past four years the cast of no play has been complete without its representatives. Several of the members have won honors in forensic speaking and elocution contests.

In athletics the class of '26 has been unusually successtul. On the baseball diamond, on the basketball floor and on the football gridiron, men of the class have given their all to bring honor to their school. Representatives from this class have during the last two years formed a very important factor in the bulwark of all Seattle College teams. In inter-class competitions, this fourth year high has invariably carried off the honors. Just as an alert mind goes with a well developed body, so also, will success go hand in hand with the members of this class.

To-night these young men are passing out of high school, never to return. Many, it is hoped, will come back next year, but then in pursuit of higher learning in the College department. Never again will this class be seen united together. Some will seek other institutions of higher learning, but most of those who do not return will enter immediately into the business world, there to apply the knowledge gained from their years of Catholic training.

Nevertheless we may say with the greatest confidence that if the co-operation, energy, good will, and success shown during their high school life, can be taken as a criterion of what they will do in the future, then this class bids fair to accomplish great and lasting deeds, and, what is more important, it will ever remain loyal to its Alma Mater, to its country and to its God.

And Pinky Dugan can be seen
Upon a Judge's chair,
Still smiling and still noted for
His curly flaming hair.

Bud Reaney is a financier,
The biggest in the town;
And "Kike," his partner, helps him to
Do everything up brown.

Clair Marshall, Dick and Buster, yes,
And all the grads, somehow,
Will stand upon Success's heights
Just one score years from now.

But life is an uncertain thing,
We may be dead by then;
We may be poor as poor can be
Or wealthy business men.

The sun will shine in skies of blue,
Just like it does today,
And clouds will drift above us then,
The same old dreamy way.

But that is all that we can say
In prophesying how
The graduates will "do their stuff"
Just twenty years from now.

PUGET SOUND POWER & LIGHT COMPANY

Were Seattle to be judged among the cities of America by its one greatest asset, its institutions of education would be chosen unanimously to represent it.

I congratulate Seattle College upon the magnificent service it is rendering both the city and the country in turning out students who are equipped to cope with the problems of life both mentally and bodily.
