PEOPLE, NOT LEADERS, RUN THIS COUNTRY

A reader who has keen vision and an active brain, writes thus: "Is there not grave danger in the growing disposition of the American people to permit such leaders as Roosevelt and Bryan—good men as they both are—to do the people's thinking for them?"

If what he claims is true, the answer would be yes; but it is not true. The leaders mentioned simply voice the people's thinking. They are prophets of the people, saying out loud what the people think.

If there should come a time when the people forget they must govern themselves—work out their own salvation—then there would be danger in surrender to leadership. Democracy is self-government, that is all. The common people must never turn over their thinking to any man or set of men, however wise. For, no matter what devices we may use, to surrender our thinking to one man means that our country is a monarchy; to give our thinking over to a set of men means that our country is an oligarchy. We must think and govern ourselves and for ourselves.

And we are doing that. Said Walt Whitman, the great Commoner: "During the Civil war I was with the armies and saw the rank and file of the north and south and studied them for four years. I have never had the least doubt about the country in its essential feature since."

Lincoln expressed the same conviction when he said, "the people always would be right." Roosevelt and Bryan are not doing the people's thinking. They are simply putting public opinion on record.

Nevertheless, it is always well to be warned. We must always teach and cherish the full and free decline of the fathers as to the complete sovereignty of the people.

That is old-fashioned Americanism and it must not die out. Let us not forget that the safety of our institutions does not hang suspended from the belt of any man, however great.

Leaders come and go. The people go on forever.

The Daily Short Story

ONLY A BABY The tottering and shivering of the frame building had ceased and as I rained from my bed, throwing from about my head and shoulders the masses of plastering and dust which had fallen from the ceiling, I found that I was unharmed. But the whole side of the building, in the fourth story of which my room was located, had fallen away, and my room had but its floor and a shattered wall.

SADDER THAN DORA THORNE'S IS THE LIFE STORY OF FLORENCE SCHENCK

MISS FLORENCE SCHENCK

NEW YORK, July 16.—"Forgive me, father, forgive me," shrieked the Florence Schenck, daughter of Dr. Powhatan S. Schenck, a former surgeon in the United States navy, and granddaughter of a former governor of Virginia, and the haughty father, who in a moment of anger and outraged pride had cast his daughter aside and disowned her, clasped the fair girl in his arms and whispered to her the words which made glad her turbulent heart.
