PREFACE.

THIS work is designed as a convenient genealogy and book of reference for the descendants of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, without regard to the family name they bear to-day. From the first to the sixth generations the records are confined to those families where either one or other parent bore the surname of Ten Broeck. In the three last generations all descendants have been given, irrespective of name.

The sources of these annals are many. In addition to the wealth of material on the shelves of libraries, wills and deeds in county offices, and church and old Dutch Bible records have been collated.

Care has been taken to make a list of all authorities. The reference figures running through the narrative portion of the book are explained by the reference index which is found on the pages preceding the index to names.

The preference shown to the "Documents Relating to the Colonial History of New York," by E. B. O'Callaghan, and the "Documentary History of New York," by the same author, is on the ground that original State documents are indisputable. The references to the Documentary History are paged according to the quarto edition.

To Mr. Henry Brace of New York I am greatly indebted. The result of years of patient investigation of early records, and of an extensive correspondence, he has most generously placed at my disposal, grudging not in addition continuous assistance in the work.

General James Grant Wilson, President of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, has kindly allowed me to incorporate into this volume the data of the Ten Broeck Family which were printed in Volume XX of The Record.

The family tradition referred to on page eight was committed to writing by the late Judge John Sanders of Schenectady, at his daughter's request. This daughter, Mrs. Harold Wilson of Clermont, has done much toward rendering this work a great pleasure by assisting in manifold ways, and by a cheerful courage which has lightened many labors.

To all, new friends and old, who have united in deeds of cordial helpfulness I give most hearty thanks. I desire especially to acknowledge my indebtedness to all who have made it possible for me to add the valued illustrations to this work. Their names are found in the text in connection with the mention of the originals, with only two exceptions. I here express my gratification that through the kindness of Miss Margaret P. Hillhouse, the copy of the portrait and also the book-plate of her ancestor, Major John C. Ten Broeck, are given in these covers. The book-plate is reproduced from the original copper-plate which was probably executed by Maverick, now owned by Mr. Mansfield Lovell Hillhouse of New Brunswick, New Jersey.

My thanks are also due Miss E. H. B. Forman of Brooklyn, through whose courtesy some years since I made the sketch of the coat-of-arms from the valued painting still in her possession.

Mr. Berthold Fernow, sometime keeper of the historical records and documents of the State of New York, made the translation from the original Dutch of the will of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck.

It remains only for me to say that this subject is not exhausted, nor without omissions and errors. But if the flame of enthusiasm shall spread, and the several branches of Ten Broecks unite to bring their records to completion, the whole aim will have been accomplished.

THE TEN BROECK GENEALOGY.

THE COLONIZATION OF NEW NETHERLAND.

THE FIRST AND SECOND GENERATIONS.

THE events which led to the colonization of the Valley of the Hudson are of great interest to all who revert with pardonable pride to ancestors whose names are synonymous with the history of those early times. When Hendrik Hudson's discoveries of the great river which bears his name, and the Indian tribes inhabiting the region, were made known, the Holland merchants were prompt to improve the rare opportunity for trade thus opened.

On March the twenty-seventh, 1614, they obtained legalized permission from the States-General at The Hague to trade along the shores of America. They soon formed themselves into a body known as "The United New Netherland Company," and gained, in addition, the grant of exclusive privilege to trade with the coast settlements for a period of three years to begin on or before the first of January, 1615.

2 The West India Trading Company

The first buildings erected for use were a block-house or fortress upon an island just below the present site of Albany, and a trading-post on the lower end of Manhattan Island. At the latter place they proceeded to collect furs and skins in immense numbers, ready for shipment to the Holland ports. The region discovered by these traders was soon named New Netherland, and recognized as Holland's dependency.

In the year 1617 a treaty of peace and goodwill was concluded between the Dutch traders and the chiefs or sachems of the five nations of Indians inhabiting this region, which proved of great value and of long continuance. The unsettled condition of affairs in Europe at this period led many wealthy merchant traders from Belgium to seek the shelter thus afforded to pursue their business, and as soon as opportunity offered a new company was incorporated. The charter conveyed the exclusive mercantile control of the Atlantic shores of America and Africa to the new body, under the title of The West India Trading Company. The central power was divided among five branches or chambers located in five principal cities of Holland, each with its directors, members and ships.

Peter Minuit, a French Protestant, a native of Wesel, the cosmopolitan city of Rhenish Prussia and adjacent to the Netherlands, was the first fully empowered Director General of this new Province. He arrived in the Bay of New Amsterdam early in May, 1626, and at once purchased from the Indian owners the present site of New York City, and vested the title in the Dutch West India Trading Company.

As colonization advanced Fort Orange was built on the present site of Albany, and clustered around it, for security, were the homes of the factors and servants of the Company, who carried forward the entire Indian trade throughout the vast tracts running back to the rivers of Ohio, and north to the boundary of the Canadian Province.

To stimulate interest, and promote civilization, the title of Patroon, with certain privileges, was granted any who should purchase lands from the Indian owners in this new world, and colonize fifty adult persons within the limit of four years. The Directors were the first to follow up this advantage, and slowly but steadily the work of agriculture advanced side by side with the work of trading.

The highest advantage of the trade thus opened accrued to those Holland merchants and Patroons who risked the most of means, though not always at the cost of personal sacrifice and toil — and it is well known how large the returns proved in many instances.

King Charles the Second, from his seat on England's throne, saw this wealth flowing past his shores at a time when his need for greater revenues was most pressing. As a first step he granted to his brother, James, Duke of York and Albany, the territory from the Connecticut River to Delaware Bay, including all Long Island and the River Hudson. Thus England's aggressive policy toward this child of Holland grew, until the squadron which conveyed Richard Nicolls, commissioned English Governor of New Netherland, arrived in the Bay of New Amsterdam and the demand for submission was heard.

There was little question of the wisest course. The Dutch were assured continued possession of their real and personal property, freedom of religious worship, and all privileges of trade and intercourse with Holland. It appeared they had little to gain by resistance, and they might lose all!

It followed that on September the eighth, 1664, New Amsterdam passed under the English flag. Beverwyck submitted on the twenty-fourth of the same month, and the title of York and Albany became the new names of the two principal settlements. Holland gained the ascendancy once more in 1673, but it was for a short time only, and when peace was declared, the Duke of York received a second patent for the province of wide domain, which from this time took on the name of New York, only narrowing her boundaries as necessity demanded.

It has been said the history of any family through seven generations, however exalted or humble it may be, presents a true picture of the progress of society — it might be added, of the political world as well. It will be found in these pages how, in the spirit of toleration and with a high sense of honor natural to the sons of Holland, this and the allied families became the true and worthy servants and sons, both of England's colonies and of the "free and independent States."

The Dutch were attached to their own national Christian belief and form of worship, and care was exercised to provide the Colony with church buildings. Accordingly, a Reformed Protestant Dutch Church was erected at Beverwyck, or Albany, in 1643. It was of wood, and the size, thirty-four feet by nineteen, only admitted of nine benches for the worshippers. A few years later, it being necessary to change the location, a new and larger building was called for. By 1715 the second had grown too small, and then the new one, of brick, was constructed in such a manner as to inclose the other, which was not demolished until the larger walls were completed around it. The last building was both ornate and curious, the pulpit and bell both being purchased in Holland.

The people worshiped according to the usages of their fathers, in the same language, and led by pastors who continued to receive their ordination in Holland; and one can imagine and picture the pride and joy they had in this house of God! How intimately it was interwoven with the lives of these early families may be brought out by calling to mind some of the customs and incidents of those days.

It was usual for the Dutch to carry their children to church for baptism, and this rite was often solemnized on the very day of birth; or, if deferred, it was rarely for many days. The entry, therefore, on the "Doopt Boek," as the volume was called in which the record was entered by the pastor, was commonly accepted as the date of birth, unless the register contained the two dates.

The poor of all the city were cared for by the church for more than a century after the granting of the Charter. The public safety was in its keeping also, as appears from the following¹: At a meeting of the Public Officers of Albany, on August the first, 1689, it was Resolved, "Since there is news of war between England and France y^t y^e gemⁿ now mett at this Convention do each bring a gun, with $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of Powder and Balls equivalent, to be hung up in y^e church in y^e space of three days, and that

For the purpose of adding to the "church adornments," a number of its members were permitted to have their armorial bearings upon the windows. Several, if not all of these paintings, were made in the Fatherland. Among the families so honored were those of Schuyler, Van Rensselaer, Wendel, Herbertsen, and, it is generally conceded, that of Ten Broeck also. There is in the family an ancient oil-painting of the Ten Broeck arms, surrounded by the mantling which characterizes both the Schuyler and the Herbertsen arms, as given in books relating to the original church glass. This painting bears no signature or date, but has descended in company with the portraits of Johannes Ten Broeck, No. 17, and his wife, of Albany. The latter bear the date of 1720.

Adaptations of the crest, arms, and motto have been preserved in the various families of the Albany branch of Ten Broecks, each separately and unknown to the others, until the past year. In this way it is found among the descendants of each of the sons of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck as follows: The seal of General Samuel Ten Broeck, No. 135; the silhouette made by Albertina Ten Broeck Sanders, No. 140; the book-plate of Major John C. Ten Broeck, No. 194, and the small silver seal of Dirck, son of General Abraham Ten Broeck. The oil-painting reproduced by steel-plate for these pages is, doubtless, of earlier date than the others. The motto, "Perge Cœpisti," is found in the latter seal abbreviated to the one word "Sustinco," thereby losing, perhaps, something of the force of the earlier words, "Continue as you have begun."

In these days, when awakened interest in events of Colonial and Revolutionary times is stirring all minds to appreciation of the characters and deeds of our forefathers, we count anew our treasures of history and tradition. It has been the aim, by the help of all available material in manuscript and in print, to trace the name and family of Ten Broeck, from the first mention of them in the chronicles of the Colony, down through the generations to the present time.

That in the search we find the name under various forms, and with different spellings, will be no surprise to any to whom has been granted the leisure and opportunity for the study of early state and family papers. It is a notorious fact that men did not always write their own names uniformly in those days. This confusing variety, it is well known, is met with in double measure in the Dutch Records: first, because frequently these Dutch names were at the mercy of an English-speaking scribe; then it was in part due to the gradual anglicizing of those foreign sounds. But it was owing, above all, to the use of patronymics in a form peculiar to the Dutch, the father's Christian name being annexed to that of the son or daughter, with the termination se, or sen, and the family or surname proper being usually omitted, or only employed when, in rare instances, the signature was of legal importance.

The custom of habitual use of the family name increased among the Dutch in New Netherland, from the time the Province was occupied by the English in 1664.

But among the Ten Broecks, it was not until the generation born under English rule in the Colony came into public prominence that the custom became invariable.

There are many blanks in our early Colonial Records, especially relating to the names of those coming to New Netherland. The Records in Holland of the West India Trading Company were sold as waste-paper in 1821.² This wanton destruction, combined with the silence of family record on the subject, leaves us only the honored tradition that Wessel Ten Broeck, the one ancestor of the several branches of the Ten Broeck family in the United States, came to the Colony of New Netherland with Peter Minuit, the first Director General, in 1626. Whether he married in the Colony or in the Fatherland, and where his children were born, is not known; we cherish the hope that search of town and church records in Holland may be soon made.

Wessel Ten Broeck's (1) Children are as follows :

- 2 I WESSEL WESSELS TEN BROECK, born in 1636; died at Kingston, N. Y., November 25, 1704.
- 3 II DIRCK WESSELS TEN BROECK, born December 18, 1638; died September 18, 1717, at his Bouwerie, Clermont, N. Y.; married at Albany in 1663 Christyña Van Buren, born May 19, 1644, died November 24, 1729, daughter of Cornelis Maessen Van Buren and Catalyntje Martensen.
- 4 III HENDRICK WESSELS TEN BROECK, resided in New York City.
- 5 IV CORNELIA WESSELS TEN BROECK, married at Albany, October 16, 1687, Dominie Laurentius Van den Bosch, fourth Pastor of the Kingston Dutch Church.³

The eldest of this family of children, Wessel Wesselse is thought to be the colonist who is recorded as coming from Münster, in Westphalia, in the ship Faith, in December, 1659.⁴ He married at the Dutch Collegiate Church, New York, on December the seventeenth, 1670, Maria Ten Eyck, daughter of Coenraedt Ten Eyck, of Amsterdam, and Marya Boelen. She died November the fifteenth, 1694, and his second wife was Laurentia Kellenaer, widow in turn of Dominie Van Gaasbeek, and of Major Thomas Chambers, Lord of the Manor of Foxhall. Shortly after his marriage, in 1670, he removed to Kingston, then Esopus, where he applied for a grant of land, which he received in 1676, and became a man of influence in the community. His descendants are known as the Kingston Ten Broecks; they erected the house now known as the "Senate House of the State of New York," in which the First Constitution of the State was adopted and proclaimed in April, 1777. The house stands in the heart of Kingston, and being now owned by the State, serves as a museum for an interesting and valuable collection of portraits, relics, and curios.

The second son, Dirck Wesselse, known as the progenitor of the Albany family of Ten Broecks, is he to whose descendants the following pages are devoted.

Church records at Albany, N. Y., confirm the tradition of the relationship of those bearing the family name, as above. Positive proof of it is found in the ancient Dordrecht Bible now in possession of Mrs. Abram Pells, of Kingston, New York.

The records in this Bible cover a period of one hundred years, in data relating to the Kingston Ten Broecks, the descendants of Wessel Wesselse. There is also an entry made by the son of Wessel Wesselse, where his "Uncle Hendrick Ten Broeck" is cited. And a later entry records the death of his "Uncle Dirck Wessels Ten Broeck." This affords a double confirmation, giving both the same name and the date as written by the eldest son of the latter, in his own family Bible. The Record reads according to the beautiful form in frequent use by this people: "1717, September 18th, Is my Uncle Dirck Wessels Ten Broeck in the Lord reposed." The following sketch is collated from state papers and manuscripts:

DIRCK WESSELS TEN BROECK.

Regarding the youth of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, and where the years were passed, we have no facts. His education can be said by inference to have been of an excellent order. He was a ready writer, expressing himself wisely and fluently as manifold duties required. He became master of the Indian language, a necessary and valuable acquisition for a man in public life in those times. Doubtless he acquired the most valuable part of his knowledge on the streets and in the council chambers of his own city, or in the solitary goings here and there as a public man on duty for the Colony. We can picture him also in the bands and knee-breeches of the times—and not indifferent to personal appearance, for early Albany records note his purchase of silver breeches buttons!

The first mention we find of his name in public life is in connection with the affairs of Peter Van Alen, a trader of Beverwyck, or Albany. And when the latter arranged to revisit Holland in 1662 he gave a power of attorney to "his servant Dirck Wessels."⁵ In a grant of land made by Richard Nicolls (the English Governor 1664-1667) Dirck Wesselse and Peter Van Alen are "partners."

The earliest date at which his signature appears on the records, as now preserved, is under date June the twenty-first, 1663. It is written "Dirck Wesselse ten Broeck."⁶ He continued to use the small "t" throughout his life, writing his children's names in the same manner.

He seems to have devoted himself to business with great intelligence and success. In 1663 he is spoken of as "a free merchant" in Albany.⁷ In a list of names, bearing the date July the twenty-seventh, 1657, relating to a shipment of skins and peltries is found this item,

"Derik Wessils 5000 beaver skins."⁸

The paper on file among the city documents is the original entry, but the date is said to be an erroneous one, which is argued from the name of the clerk and his term of office. This large shipment was doubtless correct.

Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, in 1663, signed the contract for the house and lot on the corner of State and James street, Albany, the late residence of the famous Anneke Jans, for which he agreed to pay the heirs one thousand guilders in beaver skins. The deed,⁹ given after full payment had been made, was dated July $\frac{17}{27}$, 1667. When he purchased this house in 1663, he was planning for his own home ; the same year he was married to Christina Van Buren, the daughter of an early colonist.

From this time, his importance in public affairs increased, his years were full and his cares varied. In the year 1676, the twenty-first of July, Governor Dongan appointed him Magistrate Commissary. Following this, he was chosen for the service of Envoy to Canada, and on many occasions he bore the correspondence and treaties between the English Colonial Governor and the French agents.¹⁰

Failing to receive remuneration for certain services, he petitioned the English Government on the subject. The following is the royal decision :

Whereas, It hath been represented unto us by the Petición of Derick Wessells, that having been sent upon the public service from New York to the Governor of Canada in the year 1683, for w^{ch} said service there is due unto the Petitioner the sum of seventy-four Pounds, eight shillings, of which he hath not receiv^d any part . . . you are to cause what shall appear to be due to him, for the said service, to be paid unto him out of our Revenue.¹¹

Given at our Court at Kensington By her Majesty's Command.
Signed — NOTTINGHAM, Secy.

The Charter of the "ancient town of Beverwyck, or Albany," as a city, was executed July twenty-sixth, 1686. Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck was named first in the list of Aldermen for the city.¹² The annual elections took place on S. Michael and All Angels' Day, September the twenty-ninth. Following this first election, he was made Re-

On October twenty-sixth, the same year, the Common Council nominated and appointed Dirck Wesselse Recorder, and Robert Livingston Gentⁿ, to view the land above Schenectady, on the Mohawk River, called Tiononderoga, and other land adjoining, to the extent of one thousand acres, in order to purchase it for the city.¹³

After serving the city in the capacity of Recorder for ten years, he was appointed Mayor, in 1696, by Governor Fletcher—the fourth to fill the office since the granting of the Charter. He received the appointment for the second year. The Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen were also Justices of the Peace. They held the Courts of Quarter Sessions at Albany, and the Courts of Oyer and Terminer. One of the Board presided.

Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck had been elected a member of the first representative Provincial Assembly, the one seated in 1691. He was reelected continuously to the second, third, fourth, and fifth. He was again chosen for the eighth, but was denied his seat, because of alleged non-residence in Albany.

The accession of Prince William of Orange to the English throne was a period of great anxiety and danger in the colony of New York. Jacob Leisler, a Captain of Troops in New York, resolved to assume control there in the interim preceding the appointment of a Governor by the new King. The magistrates at Albany considered that Leisler infringed and subverted the established laws, and they refused to listen to his demands for control over their city. They agreed in convention that public affairs should be managed by the Mayor and municipal officers until orders reached them from the King.

It proved impossible, however, for them to hold to their resolution. Albany was an isolated frontier town in those days, and ruin threatened the city and colony from the French and allied Indians.

It is at such times that the best there is in character and judgment is shown, and we are fortunate to be able to follow Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck through this hour of extremity.

Jacob Milborne, Commander of the Sloops for this would-be Governor, arrived at Albany on the ninth of November, 1689, and in Leisler's name demanded admittance to the fort for himself and men. This he was refused, although the Convention proceeded to invite him to land, which he did; then, instead of addressing himself to the representative men, he turned to the curious, anxious assemblage, and endeavored to incite revolt against those chosen to be the leaders.

Taken by surprise, none of the Convention replied until, being taunted with silence, Dirck Wesselse, the Recorder, said, "Time enough yet. We are not authorized to make answer to such discourse. We have seen no Commission yet. The Convention has met to provide quarters for the men, if they have come with a good intent, and the billets are now on the table. There is no arbitrary power here."¹⁴

It was decided to meet the following day, which they did, it being "the Sabbath, after the second sermon. Past Meridian." Jacob Milborne then produced his commission, signed by Leisler.

Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck quietly said, "Such a Commission, granted by a company of private men, is of no force here"; if he could "show a commission from His Majesty King William our Liege Lord," he would be willingly obeyed; but they were resolved to be quiet and in peace if possible, and they would dispute no more.

The following morning the Convention intended to go into the City Hall, but understanding there was so great a multitude of people assembled there, they remained at the residence of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, "endeavoring to agree with Jacob Milborne."¹⁵

Two letters are preserved among the Colonial MSS., both of which set forth Leisler's personal opinion and feeling regarding our ancestor, Dirck Wesselse. They are very diverse in tone, and we quote both, so far as they are of interest on this point. He wrote the Colonial Governor at Boston, under date of October twenty-second, 1689, as follows:¹⁶

I am informed your honor has received a par'lar letter from a vessell then broke Wessell [Ten brook] of Albany of which I desire your honor for a copie; he is a persone who has formerly professed Popery, and recanted a Protestant; been employed for Ambassador to Canada, and understands not one word of French, for which embassador he has been well rewarded by both parties, being a mystery to many; he is recorder at Albany, in noe quality for that office, he has occasioned, fourty miles from Albany, towards the French, to build a Fort upon his land where he has sent twelve men to guard it, who must be a sacrifice if they come & the fort a nest to the enemies—&c.

Just eight months later Leisler sent the following personal communication: ¹⁷

NEW YORK, June 22, 1690.

SIR: The character which I have before received of you from Albany, and now more particularly from Major Milborne, doth invite me to render you thanks for your readinesse and zeale in the managing and assisting the designe on foot against the French, which I hereby desire you to persevere in, and what encouragement I can afford you, assure yourselfe shall not be wanting, being much satisfied with your frequent assistance in advising wth ye Commissioners to whom I have written farther thereof.

I am you^r affectionate friend to serve you,
JACOB LEISLER.

TO MR. DIRCK WESSELLS,

The charge of "Popery" has never been traced further—and this might very probably prove to be the source, as the question of Protestantism was one of the means by which Leisler sought to aggrandize himself.

A convincing counterproof is found in the circumstance that the names of all this contemporary generation of the Ten Broeck family are of frequent mention on the books of the Reformed Dutch Church, and they were each prominently connected with affairs relating to its upbuilding, both in Albany and Kingston.

We now turn to the subject of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck's greatest activity, as no doubt it proved his noblest service to the Colony, namely: Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and his four times repeated appointment as Political Agent to Canada. This was largely a matter of business relating to the adjustment of the Indian question between the English and French.

His own account of two journeys to the French Province may prove of interest. He had been sent to the French Governor with the Truce from King James II., begging a cessation of hostilities; the report on his return was rendered to Peter Schuyler, then Mayor of Albany, and was as follows: ¹⁸

Dirck Wessells, Recorder of the City of Albany, being examined, saith, that on the eleventh of June last, he was sent from Albany by Governour Dongan to carry the Truce or Cessation made between the Kings of England and France, to the Governour of Canada; and that the two and twentyeth following he came to Mount Royall, where he found the said Governour of Canada, and to his own hand, the same day delivered the letters of the said Cessation; and that the five and twentyeth day of July past, he was againe sent by the said Governour Dongan to carry several prisoners to Canada, and came again to Mount Royall about the seventh or eighth of August, where finding the Governour, he delivered to him his letters, with the prisoners.

. . . At the time before mencōned, when he carried ye Cessation to Canada, and after the delivery thereof to the Governour there, he did every day during his stay att Mount Royall, w^{ch} was about five days, see and discourse with a certain Indian called Quetseits, who formerly lived on Hudson's River, and was well knowne to him; and that he left him there, who, as this examinant understands by the information of several of the Schathsooke Indians, was one of the eleven Indians that have lately done mischiefe in Connecticott River.

And further saith not.

Sworne y^e 25 of September, 1688, before me,

PETER SCHUYLER, Mayor.

In August the following year, when the French and Indians were doing much to alarm and disturb the people, Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, in company with another of the Board, was sent to put the farmers of Kinderhook and Claverack on their guard against incursions. One month later they went north to Schenectady, to warn the people, and to concert measures for defense. The latter warning was notably ignored, and Dirck Wesselse was present when the Council met in Albany the tenth of February, 1690, and received the dread news of the horrible massacre at Schenectady, and the burning of the settlement.

Although the snow was "above knee deep," yet the Council resolved to "bury y^e dead there, succor y^e poor people, and pursue and follow after the French and Indian enemy, and use all means imaginable to rescue the prisoners."¹⁹

In 1691 the situation at Albany became very alarming, owing to the report of a predatory attack upon the city. It was determined to try the effect of calling out men, to send a force in command of Major Peter Schuyler to gain information regarding the enemy. The Mohawks promised to help defend the frontiers, but as these warriors did not arrive at the time arranged, Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck was sent to their country to learn the cause. An idea of the inconvenience and exposure involved in this service may be gathered from the postscript to a letter written in regard to these affairs, bearing the date December thirtieth, 1691—"The scribe prays to be excused, the ink freezing in y^e pen."

The Indians of this section of the country, known among the Dutch as "The Five Nations," were distinct tribes, viz.: Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas, and Senecas. The French grouped them under the one appellation of Iroquois.

They proved themselves most reliable allies to the settlers at Albany. In 1671 they numbered about two thousand warriors. The English held them in interest as against the French, and sought their trade, which was a great source of profit.

Conferences were held on the requisition of either party. Albany was a midway meeting-place for this purpose, although the Indians' Council House was at Onondaga.

Dirck Wesselse was repeatedly sent to the Mohawk, Oneida and Onondaga Castles, to endeavor to confirm the fidelity and allegiance of the Indians to the colonists, as well as to consult with them in regard to proposals from the Canadian agents and the English governors. His journal of such an expedition in company with Robert Sanders shows the confidence he inspired.²⁰

The same high regard was felt by the colonial authorities. This was set forth in a report to the London Lords of Trade. It read in part thus: "The persons most proper to treat with them [the Indians], being very much beloved by them, in the Provinces of New York and Albany, are Mr. Peter Schuyler, late Mayor of Albany . . . and one of the Council, Mr. Dirck Wessells, Justice of the Peace at Albany," and Rev. Dr. Dellius, the Dutch pastor.²¹

Shortly after this, Governor Fletcher published the following official act:

BENJAMIN FLETCHER,

Captain General and Governor in Chief of His Majesty's Province of New York, &c.

TO PETER SCHUYLER, Esq^r, Mr. GODFREY DELLIUS, Maj^r
DIRCK WESSELLS Mayor of the City of Albany, and the Mayor of the City for the time being :

I do, by virtue of the power and authority to me given by his Maj^{ty}s. Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of England, hereby empower you, or any two of you, to treat, confer, and consult, with the Five Indian Nations; . . . and from time to time you are hereby required to give a constant and minute account of all your proceedings to me, and His Maj^{ty}s. Council for the Province of New Yorke.

Given . . . this tenth day of August, 1696.

BENJAMIN FLETCHER. ²²

The Board thus named and constituted, managed the Indian affairs for two years only, because the succeeding English Governor found it to be a source of jealousy, and restored the power to all the Magistrates of Albany.

Dirck Wesselse was instructed by Lord Bellomont to negotiate with the Five Nations at a Convention to be held at Onondaga. His "Memorial" of the transaction was rendered to the Governor, and forwarded to the French Governor of Canada. He was usually present at the frequent conferences held in Albany and elsewhere, repeatedly acting as interpreter. ²³

He was despatched by Governor Fletcher to the Oneida Indians, to endeavor to obtain possession of the person of Rev^d. Pierre Millet, ²⁴ the French Jesuit, it being well known that when the Indians became Roman Catholics they allied themselves with the French.

Finally, on October the second, 1716, Governor Hunter gave to Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck an honorable discharge from the Indian Board, where during thirty years he had labored for the peace and security of the Colony, and the protection and civilization of the Indians.²⁵

The men of those days had need of patriotism in every form, and it is no surprise that one who dealt wisely for the people should also take up arms in their defense.

When in 1690 the French resolved to make a descent into the English Provinces, Fitz-John Winthrop was Commander-in-Chief of the Colonists, who advanced in defense of their borders. On his march in August of that year, he made the following entry in his journal:

Quartered this night at a place called Saratoga, about fifty English miles from Albany, where is a block-house, and some of the Dutch soldiers. At this place I overtook Mr. Wessells, Recorder of the City of Albany, and a Company of the principal gentleman Volunteers of that city.

From this time Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck served as a leader of volunteers in times of danger. He was soon advanced from the position of Captain to that of Major under Colonel Peter Schuyler, who at this period commanded all the New York forces. When Governor Coote rendered the first report of the Colonial Militia, in 1700, he was cited as Field Officer in Schuyler's Regiment, and always thereafter was familiarly known as Major Wessells.²⁶

According to the custom then prevailing among the more prosperous, Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck became a large landholder.

Under date of May thirteenth, 1686, Governor Dongan confirmed the deed for the "house and lot on the north side of Yonkhers (State) Street, where he built his little house that stands to the eastward of his greate house," and the deed of a "lot on which Dirck Wesselse and Jacob Sanderse Glen have built a tradeing house," and also a purchase from the Magistrates of Albany of "a piece of ground for a garden, lying behind the old Fort adjoining the King's pasture." The "token as Quit Rent" for the above was four shillings yearly.²⁷

In reviewing Patents, or Grants for large tracts of land, it must be called to mind that the Dutch always held themselves bound to respect the rights of the Indians as proprietors of the soil, and purchased the title from them. As an added pledge of fair-dealing, the purchaser was required to make application to the Governor, before the sale, and received a confirmation from him, after obtaining the deed properly drawn and executed.

The first tract of uncultivated land so purchased by Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck comprised four flats, or plains, lying on the Kinderhook Creek, "one Dutch mile from Jan Tysen Goes, with the woodland extending to the high hills." The land now is on the east and southeast of Kinderhook Lake, in the present town of Chatham. The original title-paper for this tract, dated October eighth, 1679, is a curious sheet; the strange signs and characters of the Indians' totems, and the seals, occupy much space in the document.²⁸ There were five, “alle Westenhoekse Wilde” who gave title. Sir Edmund Andros, Governor, confirmed it by a Patent dated April fifteenth, 1680.

The purchase and Patent of the “tract of land called Sarachtogic” was completed in 1684.²⁹ It included the land on both sides of the Hudson, from where Mechanicville now stands to Battenkill: twenty-two miles in extent north and south, and twelve miles east and west. The patentees numbered seven: Cornelis Van Dyck, Jan J. Bleecker, Peter P. Schuyler, Johannes Wendel, Dirck Wessells, David Schuyler, and Robert Livingston. In the spring of 1685 they made a division of the lowlands; for this purpose they chose disinterested men to parcel it, according to value and location; and one child each, of the several partners, drew a ticket out of a hat.³⁰ Dirck Wesselse’s lot was known as Number three. This land continued in the possession of descendants of the line of the oldest son for several generations; and by a strange happening, General Abraham Ten Broeck led men to victory on this very spot, when the decisive battle of Saratoga was fought, in the days of ’76.

On February sixth, 1697, a petition signed by Peter Schuyler, Dr. G. Delliuss, Dirck Wessells, and Evert Bancker, was presented to the Governor and Council, asking permission to purchase a tract of land on the Mohawk River, extending about fifty miles in length and two in breadth, on each side of the river. In June permission was granted the applicants to make the purchase, “provided Judge Pinhorne be included.” On July the eighth a bill of sale was signed by the chief Sachem “Rode” and seven other Mohawks.

The story of this grant, and the trouble it brought upon those deeply interested in it, is a long one, and for many reasons very sad. The deed given and signed by the Mohawks contained the following condition: "It is the true intent and meaning of this instrument that if we, or any of our posterity, shall have occasion or need of any part of said land, we or they shall have provision for our planting or occupancy." The same month the deed was presented, and a patent given. But, strangely enough, the description of the tract in the patent did not agree with that in the deed; it made no reservation for the occupancy of the Indians at the present, or for future time.

When this became known, it created great excitement; two of the Indians testified they had never intended to alienate their lands, and they desired the patent annulled. After public meetings and deliberations two patentees, viz., "Colonel Schuyler and Major Wessells, both of Albany, freely and of their own accord, resigned their respective interests therein to His Majesty."³¹ The Council decided this, and other exorbitant grants, to be of "great prejudice to the City and Country, and a source of discouragement to the Indians." The remaining patentees were requested to resign, Dr. Dellius was suspended from the exercise of his ministerial functions, and the Mohawk patent was annulled.

Why the descriptions in the patent and the deed did not agree, it is difficult and impossible to answer. It is manifestly unfair to ascribe the change to any of the four original patentees; they had been, and continued to be, the best friends the Indians knew. Dr. Dellius had been highly regarded by them, and by all; he had learned the Indian language, instructed them in the faith, and baptized many of them. One of the Indians at his departure said, "I am grieved to my soul that you are going away."

In the Records we find a patent for what probably proved to be the final purchase Dirck W. Ten Broeck made of these large tracts. The Indian deed, and the stamp of the seal of the Province, attesting the sale to nine gentlemen, of whom one was Major Wessells Ten Broeck, were dated October, 1703, and April, 1704, and describe the patent known as the Westenhook. Kinderhook was the western line, and Claverack the southern of this tract, stretching east to Massachusetts and north to Rensselaerwyck.

The partition of this tract among the patentees did not take place until Dirck W. Ten Broeck and all his children had passed away.

It has been reserved until last to refer to an investment which proved the greatest satisfaction and pleasure. This was two tracts of land, the one lying on both sides of Roelof Jansen's Kil, of twelve hundred acres, and the other situated on the Hudson River, containing six hundred acres, both of them part of the finest land included in the tract that had been erected into Livingston Manor in 1686. The smaller tract commenced at a point but two thousand paces south of the Manor House.

It has been questioned why Livingston parted with this valuable tract, and whether Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck might not have been a silent partner in the original grant. But the fact remains that "Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, merchant of Albany," received deed from Robert Livingston for these lands on October twenty-sixth, 1694, in consideration of fifteen pounds and an annual rental of ten shillings.

The creek, or Kil, running through the larger of these tracts, is still called by the unusual name of those days, when it first gave the distinctive title to the Bouwerie, or farm, of Major Ten Broeck. Roelof Jansen, the first husband of Anneke Jans, was Assistant Bouwmeester for the Patroon of Rensselaerwyck; he died about 1636. The current tradition regarding the name of the stream is as follows: Owing to a very severe winter in those early times, Roelof Jansen's boat became so wedged in the ice of this Kil, that he was obliged to spend the season with the neighboring Indians, and await the warm air of spring to release him, and ever thereafter the waters bore his name.

On the banks of this Kil, on a gentle rise of ground, Dirck W. Ten Broeck had dwelling and barns erected, and his interest grew and centered here, as the years passed on. His great-granddaughter, Albertina Ten Broeck (No. 140 who subsequently became the wife of Mr. John Sanders), was probably the last of the family born in the house then erected upon the Bouwerie. She made a silhouette illustration of the place, which is both curious and interesting — a blending of imagination and reality. It will recall the situation of the house to any whose good fortune it has been to visit the spot so fraught with interest, and shows the strength and force of a few lines to picture the life of the period.

While Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck withdrew from the more arduous cares and responsibilities of public life, he was still retained as Schepen, or Justice Magistrate, to which office Governor Dongan had appointed him many years previous.

Among other things this involved was the adjustment of differences arising in regard to the Palatines sent out by Queen Anne. Governor Hunter directed that all such should be submitted to him.³²

Throughout the years of his residence in Albany, he served the church liberally with his best of means and time. In a list of twenty-four persons, entitled, because of their contributions, to seats in the new-made gallery of the church, the name of Dirck Wesselse is found; it being the old-time custom for the men of the congregation to occupy this place.³³ His name, with that of his wife, stand on the earliest extant list of members, and the children and grandchildren were baptized according to their faith and custom.

In 1673 he was a Deacon, and that year audited the accounts of the Treasurer. On the first of January, 1675, he assumed charge of the Book of Income and Expenditure.³⁴ He opened the entries by an introduction somewhat unusual: "Geft Godt allen de Eer," i. e., "Give God alone the Glory." For two consecutive years the books were kept in his handwriting, and frequently thereafter his signature shows his indorsement of the various Treasurers' accounts.

In consequence of one of their pastors preaching "heretical doctrines" from the church pulpit, on Sunday, August thirteenth, 1676, "an extraordinary court" was held, and Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck was one of those to hear the case.³⁵ They passed judgment in words that carry wisdom to all generations: "Church disagreements should be consumed in the fire of love."

On the church books of 1690 stands a long letter, signed by his name, in which is set forth the "feeble and destitute condition of the church, by reason of the contemplated removal of Dr. Dellius." These two instances attest him to have been not unmindful of either her spiritual or temporal welfare.

It is a gratification to find that the private life of our ancestor was singularly happy and congenial. His wife proved a true helpmeet in all ways; the confidence he reposed in her requires the sole proof that by his last will, made when she had passed her three-score and tenth year, he intrusted to her the management of his large estate, besides placing the entire income at her disposal.

Large families were the fashion in those days, and at the hearthstone of rich and poor alike was the joyous sound of children's voices heard. This circle numbered six sons and seven daughters. Only two of these — twin sons — died in infancy; eleven children reached maturity, and all married.

Shortly after Major Ten Broeck passed the age of three-score and ten, he withdrew from the activities of public life and residence in Albany, and the Bouwerie became his permanent home. Seeming to realize that his life drew toward the evening, he calmly inventoried all his possessions, and by his will arranged for the division of his estate.

Finally, on September the eighteenth, 1717, the end came — a long and useful career was closed. He was laid to rest on his own place, according to the frequent custom of those times. The natural terrace, above the home where he had sought the repose and quiet the city denies its master-men, afforded a beautiful spot where, to this day, the peace and purple of the mountains, rising against the western sky, seem a continued promise of permanent security and repose. Near him, in this final resting-place, have been gathered, now and again, some of his own descendants, marking the generations for almost two centuries.

The record of his death, written in the Dordrecht family Bible by his eldest son, reads thus: "My father, Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, died on 18th September, 1717, aged seventy-eight years and nine months."

The will, written in Dutch, is on file with others of early date, in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals, in the Albany Capitol. With a feeling akin to awe, one turns over the pages of the document and reads as follows:

IN THE NAME OF THE LORD.

On the fourth day of February, in the first year of our Sovereign King George of Great Britain, &c., and in the year of our Lord 171 $\frac{4}{5}$, I, Dirck Wesselsen ten Broeck, formerly of Albany, now of the Manor of Livingston, being sound in body and mind, having and using my memory, but considering the shortness and frailty of human life, the certainty of death, and uncertain hour thereof, have advisedly, without inducement, persuasion, or misleading by anybody, made, ordained, and concluded, this my last Will and Testament, revoking and an-nulling hereby all and each Testament formerly by me made and executed. This to be taken as my last Will and Testament, as follows :

First.—I commend my immortal soul, whenever it shall leave my body, to the gracious and charitable hands of God, my Creator and Saviour ; my body to a Christian burial in the earth, whence it came, and there to remain until the day when my soul and my body shall be re-united, on the day of resurrection, to share in the ineffable joy of eternal bliss, which God in his grace has prepared and promised, through the death of Jesus Christ, for and to all who faithfully believe in Him.

I. Concerning such worldly goods as the Lord has been pleased to bestow on me, far above my deserts, I give and dispose of them as follows :

II. I give to my eldest son, Wessel ten Broeck, as his privilege of first-born son, the sum of three pounds current money of New York ; and I desire that he shall make no further claim upon my estate than an equal share, as given hereafter to his Sisters and Brothers.

III. It is further my will and desire, that after my death my honest debts shall be paid by my heirs, in due time.

IV. I appoint my well-beloved wife, Christÿna Wesselsen ten Broeck, executrix and administratrix of my whole estate, real and personal ; lands, houses, lots, bonds, notes, rents, gold and silver, coined and uncoined ; jewels, clothing, linen, woollen, horses, cattle, negro slaves, and whatever else, nothing in the world excepted nor reserved from my whole estate, here, in England, Holland or elsewhere, wherever it may be ; to administer thereon, without interference or contradiction by my children or anybody else, or that she should be held to give an accounting or inventory during the time of her widowhood ; but with this express condition, that she shall not be allowed to sell, alienate, or exchange any of my real estate, wherever it may be, such as lands, houses, lots and mortgages, but only use thereof the fruit, and yearly income of which she may dispose during her widowhood. But, if she should again marry, she shall be held, before entering anew into the state of matrimony, to surrender the whole estate, according to a sworn inventory, to my sons, to wit: Wessel ten Broeck, Samuel ten Broeck, Johannes ten Broeck and Tobias ten Broeck, whom I then appoint executors of my whole estate, real and personal, to administer thereon.

They shall be held to give to my said wife one-third of the yearly revenue, during her life, and the other two-thirds, after deducting all expenses, I desire shall by them be equally divided between my eleven children, or their heirs, namely:

Wessel ten Broeck, Elsje ten Broeck, wife of Johannes Cuyler; Catalyntje ten Broeck, wife of John Lissger; Cornelia ten Broeck, wife of Johannes Wynkoop; Geertruy ten Broeck, wife of Abraham Schuyler; Christyna ten Broeck, wife of Johannes Van Alen; Elisabeth ten Broeck, wife of Antony Costar; Lidia ten Broeck, wife of Volkert Van Vechten; Samuel ten Broeck, Johannes ten Broeck, Tobias ten Broeck, each to have one just eleventh share.

V. After the death of my wife, I give to my eldest son Wessel ten Broeck two-thirds of all my lands at Saratoga, in the County of Albany; and the other third I give to my daughter Geertruy, wife of Abraham Schuyler. Said lands being the just seventh part of the whole Saratoga patent, granted to me, Col. Peter Schuyler, and others. I give this to my said eldest son, and to my daughter Geertruy as above said, to wit: two-thirds to the said Wessel ten Broeck and his heirs forever, provided that these stretches of pasture-land shall be counted as £125, New York currency, in the share of my said son Wessel ten Broeck, in the estate which I shall have. And likewise the third part given to my said daughter Geertruy shall be counted as £75, New York currency; which said third part, I give to her, and her heirs, as equivalent to the mentioned sum, forever, after the death of my wife.

VI. Further, I give to my sons, Samuel ten Broeck and Tobias ten Broeck, all my lands in the said Manor of Livingston, according to the conveyance to me from Mr. Robert Livingston, to be divided into two equal parts, of which my son Tobias shall first choose his half, and the other half shall go to my son Samuel, and to their respective heirs forever. I also give to my two sons, Samuel and Tobias aforesaid, four horses, four cows, four sheep, four pigs; one of my negroes, to be selected by them; all farming utensils which then shall be found on my bouwery, for which I will that my said sons shall each pay to my said executors the sum of £190, New York currency, or together £380; provided that each of them may retain the full share of his inheritance from said sum. If their share should not amount to as much, then they add and pay to the administrators the difference. If their share amounts to more, then it shall be paid to them out of the estate; but they shall not be allowed to make a claim on the land here given to them, until after the death of my said wife; then they shall receive as their own the land with houses, barns, brewery, and other privileges.

VII. After my wife's death, I give to my son Johannes ten Broeck, my two houses and lots in the City of Albany; on the north side of Yonkers (State) street, on the west side of Yaugh (now James) street, on the east side of the house and lot of Antony Costar, and on the south side of said Costar, according to conveyance, to him and his heirs forever. I also give to the said Johannes all my right and title in and to land on the east side of Hudson's River, on a Kil called Kinderhoek Kil, which is not sold yet; according to the patents from Sir Edmond Andros and Colonel Thomas Dongan,—to him, his heirs and assigns forever: which houses and lots, and right and title to land on Kinderhoek Kil I value at £200, New York currency, and I will that so much shall be refunded to the estate, after deducting as much as one-eleventh part of the whole shall amount to, and the residue shall be paid to my executors for the behoof of my other heirs; and if his share is larger, then it shall be paid to him by the administrators.

VIII. It is my wish and will, and I give all my other lands, houses, and lots, excepting what as above I have given to my said sons and daughter Geertruy, and all my negro slaves, cattle, and other property of whatsoever nature it may be, after my own and my wife's death, to my said eleven children, to be sold to each, and the proceeds accumulated, which, with the sums to be paid by my sons and daughter, shall then be equally divided among my said eleven children, it being well understood that my said sons and daughter Geertruy, shall not pay more for their land, as appraised by me, than so much as it amounts to, more than their eleventh part of my whole estate.

IX. It is further my wish and will, that none of my real estate shall be sold to strangers, but it shall always remain in my family.

X. It is my wish and will, that Christina Legget, when she comes to marriageable age, shall have a good outfit.

All the above I declare to be my last Will, requesting that it may have full effect in every way.

Thus done and concluded, at my Bouwery, in the Manor of Livingston, and signed and sealed by my own hand this Fourth of February, 171 $\frac{4}{5}$.

This will was proved on the sixth of February, 1718. A few months later, on September the first, the wife of Major Ten Broeck took steps to have assistance from those she trusted in executing the expressed wishes and will of her husband. She appointed her—

Loving sons, Wessel Ten Broeck, Johannis Ten Broeck, and my son-in-law, Johannis Cuyler, all of the City of Albany, to be my true and lawful and irrevokable Attorneys, rendering account to me, when thereunto required; and after my decease, unto the heirs of the said Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck.

She outlived her husband a little more than twelve years. Doubtless Albany became again her home during this time, and it was her choice to return to the more familiar place, where she had known many happy years, now the residence of her son Johannes. She died on the twenty-fourth of November, 1729, and was interred in the Dutch Church of Albany.

Her parents, Cornelis Maessen Van Buren and Catalyntje Martensen, came to the Colony from Guelderland, Holland, in 1631, in the ship "Arms of Rensselaerwyck." They were probably from Buren, near which is the castle of the Counts Buren. They lived on the Manor of Rensselaerwyck, and died there in 1648, both being buried on the same day.³⁷

The present geographical situation of the Bouwerie of Dirck W. Ten Broeck is in Columbia County, New York, in the towns (townships) of Clermont and Livingston.

Columbia County was formed largely from Albany County, in the year 1786.

Although the injunction "real estate shall always remain in the family" could not in every instance be observed, yet it is a great satisfaction to note that parts of each of these tracts are still the property of descendants.

THIRD GENERATION.

WESSEL TEN BROECK (6).

Wessel, the eldest child and son of Major Ten Broeck, married a few days before he was twenty years of age Caatje Loockermans, a maiden of fifteen, the daughter of one of the early men of Albany. They resided in what was called, in those days, the third ward of Albany, and as a merchant and citizen he was active and useful in both public and private life.

He first appears in a public capacity in that dangerous period of the change on England's throne, and the uncertainty of authority in her colonies, when, on November the fifth, 1689, "forty of ye inhabitants, principall men of ye town and county of Albany, agreed to keep the Fort and City, for the behoofe of King William and Queen Mary, . . . promising to assist, if occasion required, for the preservation of Peace and Tranquility."

Beginning with January, 1695, he audited, for two years, the deacon's books of the Dutch Church, and in 1697 he kept them, jointly, with Hendrick Van Rensselaer.³⁹ He was present as a church officer and also as a city magistrate, when Dr. Delliuss, the pastor, owing to the misunderstanding consequent upon the granting of the famous Mohawk Patent, held his farewell interview with the Indian converts⁴⁰ in June, 1698.

He signed the petition of the Protestant subjects in the colony to King William the Third,⁴¹ in December, 1701. As a Deputy from the city and county of Albany, he greeted Lord Cornbury on his arrival as Governor-General in 1702, and was one of those to present to him the address of allegiance and welcome.⁴²

Wessel Ten Broeck was an alderman of Albany at the time his father served as mayor of the city; he was a member of the Indian Board during the conference with the Five Nations,⁴³ held in 1701, and almost continuously, for twenty-five years, he stood among the men in whom the citizens reposed the public trust.

There was constant need for measures of defense in those times, and when in 1700 Lord Bellomont prepared the report of the militia, Wessel Ten Broeck was Lieutenant of a company of foot soldiers under Colonel Schuyler.⁴⁴

He applied for a grant of land, and received the certificate in 1733. It was situated on the west side of the Hudson River, and extended from the Kaaterskill to the banks of the Hudson, about five miles south of Catskill. He mentioned this tract in his will, which was dated June the tenth, 1723, and recorded January the twenty-ninth, 1753, in the Albany County Clerk's office, Volume I., page 215.

The family Bible of Wessel Ten Broeck is of great interest; it is in Dutch, printed in 1682, at Dordrecht, Holland. This illustration, and the one on page 150, will give an idea of the size and appearance. Heavy boards, covered with tooled leather, form the binding; the corners are finished with brass pieces, and the book has clasps of the same metal. Between the Old and New Testaments are maps of Asia Minor and Egypt, and also a drawing representing Paradise.

The records are found on the boards of the covers and on the blank pages next to these, in both the front and back of the volume. The writing is in Holland Dutch, the earliest date being the marriage of Wessel to "Cattryna Locermans," on the second of April, 1684. The entries pertaining to his children and descendants are very full.

The Bible is now the property of a lineal descendant — Mr. Andrew J. Ten Broeck, of North Germantown, Columbia County, New York.

ELSJE TEN BROECK (7).

Elsje married November 2, 1684, Johannes Cuyler, the son of Hendrick Cuyler, who came to Albany in 1664. He was Indian Commissioner for a number of terms, beginning with 1706, and was appointed mayor of Albany in 1725. He was deacon in the Albany Dutch Church in 1695 and 1700, and in later years an elder. They always resided in Albany, and upon Elsje's death she was accorded the honor of being interred in the church, according to the following note: "Elsje Cuyler buried in the Albany Church July the second, 1752."

CORNELIA TEN BROECK (9).

Cornelia married Johannes Wynkoop. The marriage license was dated June the second, 1696.

Johannes Wynkoop took the oath of allegiance in the colony in 1689 as from Ulster County, New York. In 1728 he was recognized as a freeholder of Kingston, and was also a major of militia. The same year, in a "List of Commanding Officers, as well military as civil," he is classed with "Old officers and old men."

His last will was dated June the ninth, 1730, and he died shortly thereafter.

Children of Cornelia Ten Broeck (9) and Johannes Wynkoop.

- 47 V LYDIA, baptized at Kingston, February 21, 1714; died young.

GEERTRUY TEN BROECK (10).

Geertruy was married at Albany, November the eleventh, 1691, to Abraham Schuyler, who was for many years one of the most prominent men of that city.

He was familiar with the Indian language, and at one time resided among the Seneca tribe as agent for the government.

When, in 1709, the colony sent an expedition to England, with a view of proving to the Queen the importance of preserving the friendship of the Five Nations, he accompanied Colonel Peter Schuyler and the five Indian chiefs as their interpreter. He noted the fact in his Bible in the following entry: "1709, December 16th. I went with Colo. Schuyler to England, and returned through the Grace of God, July 26th. 1710."

He died, after a brief illness, on July the ninth, 1726, "at Sonnock's Land," where, as the name indicates, he had gone on a visit to the Seneca tribe.

Gertrude continued to reside in Albany, and outlived her husband more than twelve years.

Her son Dirck (50) was among the first of the Holland Dutch who came from the upper Hudson to East Jersey. He, with William Williamson and others, petitioned for the charter of New Brunswick,⁴⁵ which was granted in 1730.

He became a merchant in that city, and resided there until his death, in 1779. He left no descendants.

- 57 v DIRCK WESSELE, baptized October 28, 1710; married probably Catharina Johanna.

ELIZABETH TEN BROECK (12).

Elizabeth married on December the fifteenth, 1698, Anthony Costar. Their residence was the property adjoining, on the west, her paternal home on Yonkers Street (now State Street) in Albany.

They were granted more than a half century of married life. Anthony Costar died and was buried in Albany, February the sixth, 1753; Elizabeth, his wife, surviving him four years.

- 61 IV EPHRAIM, baptized September 23, 1716.

LIDIA TEN BROECK (13).

The marriage of Lidia, the youngest daughter of Major Ten Broeck, to Volckert Van Vechten, took place on the twenty-sixth of August, 1702.

He was a grandson of Teunis Dircksen Van Vechten, who came to the Colony in the ship "Arms of Norway," about the year 1648. His descendants had settled in Rensselaerwyck, and on the banks of the Hudson.

Lidia died in August, 1748, and was interred at Albany.

Children of Lidia Ten Broeck (13) and Volckert Van Vechten.

- 62 I GERRIT TEUNIS, baptized April 25, 1703; died March, 1747; buried at Albany, March 12, 1747; married November 6, 1739, Lena, baptized March 27, 1709, daughter of Jan Witbeck and Agnietje Brouck.
- 63 II MARGARITA, baptized March 3, 1706, married at Albany, July 15, 1729, Gerrit C. Vandenberg, baptized September 19, 1703, son of Cornelis Gysbertse Vandenberg, and Maria Van Buren, who had married first Teunisse Van Deusen.

SAMUEL TEN BROECK (14).

Samuel, through the bequest of his father Dirck Wes-selse Ten Broeck, inherited his portion of the estate in lands that were part of the bouwerie on the Roelof Jansen Kil, in the section where the Ten Broeck family is one of the most ancient. It was here that he passed the years of his life, and by his will made the twenty-third of April, 1750, he devised the larger part of the tract to his eldest son.

This property had formerly been divided between Albany and Dutchess Counties, but by the Act of May the twenty-fourth, 1717, relating to certain grants on the south of the Roelof Jansen Kil, it was all annexed to Albany County, and remained thus until, in 1786, the lines were once more changed, and it became part of the new county of Columbia.

In a list of freeholders, made in 1720, "pursuant of an order of Court," Samuel Ten Broeck is cited as "of Claverack."⁴⁶ He was also justice of the peace for Albany County.

He was married on November the seventh, 1712, to Maria Van Rensselaer, in the "two steeple" church of Albany.

He and his younger brother Johannes married sisters, the daughters of Hendrick Van Rensselaer and grand-daughters of Johannes Van Brugh. They were of notable lineage in both branches, reaching back to the Patroons of Rensselaerwyck, and to Anneke Jans, so famous in New York litigation suits; and through the latter, descended from the ninth Prince of the House of

Orange,—William of Nassau, Sovereign Count of the States of Holland and Zealand. ⁴⁷

- 69 III HENDRICK, baptized March 24, 1717; died at Claverack, 1796; married October 14, 1743, Annatje, baptized October 22, 1722, daughter of Anthony Van Schaick and Anna Cuyler (28).
- 70 IV JOHANNES, baptized September 4, 1720.
- 71 V CATHRINA, baptized at Johnstown, Columbia County, N. Y., August 5, 1722; died May 18, 1753; married 1st, January 3, 1744, Ephraim Van Vechten (64), baptized June 12, 1709, died at New Brunswick, N. J., December 10, 1746, son of Volckert Van Vechten and Lidia Ten Broeck; married 2nd, January 29, 1752, Robert Johannes Lansing, born January 17, 1707, died March 3, 1795, son of Johannes Gerrit Lansing and Helena Sanders.
- 72 VI JOHANNES, baptized at Johnstown, October 18, 1724; died October 23, 1793; married December 12, 1753, Marytje Hoffman, died at Hudson, N. Y., May 10, 1805, in her 75th year.
- 73 VII JEREMIAS, baptized February 1, 1727; died October 24, 1802; married 1756 — marriage license June 10, 1756—to Marytje, born November 20, 1733, probably daughter of Adam Van Alen and Catharine Van Alsteyn.

- 74 VIII CHRISTINA, born November 29, 1729; married at Claverack, September 4, 1754, Harmanus Schuyler, born at Schenectady, April 2, 1727, died September 1, 1796, son of Nicolaas Schuyler and Elsie Wendell.

JOHANNES TEN BROECK (17).

Johannes, the fifth son of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck and Christina Van Buren, was the son upon whom his father depended in great confidence. His name alone, among those of the family, can be found as witness to transfers of lands.⁴⁸ To him was bequeathed the home of his parents in Albany, the storehouse there, and the title of merchant, in his father's stead.

He was married twice. The first wife, Elizabeth Wendell, was a daughter of Johannes Wendell, and belonged to the well-known family of Albany. She lived but a short time, and Johannes Ten Broeck married on December the twenty-ninth, 1714, Catryna, the second daughter of Hendrick Van Rensselaer, Patroon of the lower manor of Rensselaerwyck.

He was made assistant alderman in 1715, and in the list of freeholders, taken in 1720, he was of the first ward of Albany. Three years later, in 1723, he was an alderman, and one of His Majesty's justices of the peace.⁴⁹

ference in Albany, Johannes Ten Broeck was present on the Board of City Officers.⁵⁰

He continued to fill his place as representative of the first ward of Albany until 1740, when he was appointed city chamberlain or treasurer,⁵¹ which position he held for three terms.

A picture of the times, as well as of the values of the period, may be found in the following: The City Council, in August, 1737, "agreed that Johannes Ten Broeck be allowed twenty shillings to make a bridge in the Yoncker Street, on the east side of the Well, opposite Widow Livingston's."

About the time of his withdrawal from public life there was recorded a deed, in part as follows:⁵² "Johannes Ten Broeck, of the city of Albany, and Catharina, his wife, sell to Luykas Wyngaert, merchant of Albany, for four hundred and twenty Pounds, two Houses and two Lotts, in the First Ward of the City, on the north side of Yonckers Street, bounded on the West and North by the house and lott of Anthony Costar, and to the East by the Lane; the same property received by the Will of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, Father of the said Johannes Ten Broeck," etc. The date of the paper is the thirtieth of October, 1743.

Tradition affirms that Johannes Ten Broeck and Catharine, his wife, came to New Brunswick, New Jersey, at this time, in company with their third son, Johannes.

Their portraits, painted in 1720, are in possession of a direct descendant in the sixth generation — Louis Barcroft Runk, Esq., of Philadelphia.

TOBIAS TEN BROECK (18).

Tobias, youngest of the children of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, outlived his father only a few years. Unfortunately, less is known of his descendants than of those of the other sons.

He was Lieutenant of the "Independent Companie of Militia of Livingston Manor,"⁵³ mustered at the manor house, November the thirtieth, 1715 — a company seeing much actual service, and maintained during all the succeeding colonial period.

He was appointed justice magistrate for Albany County in 1719. The year following, his name stood at the head of the Claverack list of freeholders.⁵⁴

Tobias Ten Broeck was married at the Albany Church on October the twenty-fourth, 1714, to Maritie Van Stryen, and they resided at the bouwerie, on Roelof Jansen's Kil. He inherited from his father one half of the lands in this section, the will giving him the first choice of location.

He died at his bouwerie, on the twenty-eighth of January, 1724, aged thirty-five years, and was buried in the family plot. His widow, Maritie Ten Broeck, married, about three and a half years later, Dominie Johannes Van Driessen, of Albany.

THE FOURTH GENERATION.

ANNA C. TEN BROECK (19).

Anna Catharina, eldest child of Wessel (6), was born in Albany, April the twenty-fifth, 1685. The baptism is recorded under the same date; the godparents being her maternal grandmother Tryntje Lookermans, and the grandfathers on both sides, Jacob Lookermans and Dirck W. Ten Broeck.

She married, at the age of twenty-two, Anthony Van Schaick, a descendant of the early colonist whose name is familiar in New York annals.

They resided in Albany. Anthony Van Schaick died in February, 1737, and was interred at Albany on the fourth of that month. His wife, Anna Catharina, survived him six years.

- 101 VIII DIRCK, baptized April 4, 1725.

DIRCK TEN BROECK (20).

It was a fitting choice that bestowed the distinctive christian name, now so familiar in Albany annals, upon the eldest son of this generation.

He was a merchant, and first came into prominence in connection with the Indian traffic, which continued to be of great importance. The municipal officers of the city were empowered by Common Council on March the second, 171 $\frac{1}{2}$, to encourage this trade, and to appoint "a good and sufficient person to inspect all skins that shall be offered for sale or shipped." Dirck Ten Broeck received and accepted the appointment, for the revenue of a halfpenny each skin.⁵⁵

He was a freeholder in the third ward of Albany in 1720, and a deacon in the Dutch Church. On August the third, that year, he, with the officers, petitioned for an "Act of Incorporation," under the title of The Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in Albany.⁵⁶ One week later, August the tenth, he conveyed by deed to the church, "for perpetual use and ownership," a plot of ground, which had been "late the occupancy of Dirck Wesselse, and now used as a garden." This property was situated on Pearl Street.

In July, 1722, Dirck Ten Broeck was an alderman of Albany. He was appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and repeatedly, for fifteen years from 1728, he heard and signed the many important petitions coming before that Board.

On November the twenty-sixth, 1730, the intrigues of the French with the Five Nations became so threatening that the commissioners appealed to Governor Montgomerie. This paper also bears the signature of Dirck Ten Broeck.⁵⁷

He became recorder of the city in 1728, and was mayor from September the twenty-ninth, 1746, for three terms, under Governor Clinton.

He married on November the twenty-sixth, 1714, Margarita Cuyler. The list of their children and the family alliances includes names which will attract the attention of every intelligent reader.

The plate represents an "ooma," a piece of silver which belonged to Dirck and Margarita Ten Broeck. Their joint initials, in the style of marking then usual, are on the inside rim of the cover. The name was derived from the Dutch word "oom," signifying uncle, as the article was a favorite gift of an uncle to either a niece or nephew on the wedding day. It was used to sprinkle the mixed cinnamon and sugar on hot waffles. This silver is now owned by Mrs. S. Sidney Smith, of Argyle, New York, whose husband was a descendant through Catryna (102), the eldest child of the family.

Dirck Ten Broeck died on January the third, 1751, and on the seventh instant was interred in the Albany church. His wife survived him thirty-two years, living until she attained the age of ninety.

By his will, made July the first, 1748, and probated at Albany May the third, 1768, he bequeathed "the Great Dutch Bible, the Holland Gun, and the Clock" to his son Abraham, who became the future General. He appointed his sons Abraham and Dirck, the executors.

Albany church by Dominic Lydius, a successor to Dr. Godfrey Dellius. His sponsors were the maternal grandparents, Jacob and Mariya (Tryntje) Lookermans.

He married first, on September the twenty-ninth, 1725, his cousin Christina Van Alen (54), and after her death in 1753, took for his second wife Catrina Van Benthuyzen. The family of eleven children were by the first marriage.

They resided upon part of the Ten Broeck Patent, on the west side of the Hudson—land inherited from Jacob's father, Wessel Ten Broeck (6).

The names of localities which appear in connection with this branch of the family are unusual. The farm, which was situated upon the Kaaterskil, was called Lokeren—doubtless after the town by that name in Belgium, northeast of Ghent, and brings to mind Browning's lines :

'T was moonset at starting ; but while we drew near Lokeren, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear.

— How They Brought the Good News to Aix.

Kaatsbaan, the name found in the data following, is the site of a Dutch church established about 1732, and is seven miles south of Catskill, on the Old King's Road.

The portrait of Jacob is owned by Mr. Andrew J. Ten Broeck, of North Germantown, N. Y., the lineal descendant in the fifth generation. It was evidently painted about 1720, and the similarity to the portrait of Johannes Ten Broeck (page 50) is very striking. They are framed alike also—in the original black-enameled moulding of that early date. The tradition concerning these pictures is the same — that they were executed in Holland, although we have no record of the voyage, in either case.

CORNELIUS TEN BROECK (27).

Cornelius, the youngest child of Wessel Ten Broeck, was a merchant, and a citizen of Albany. He married on the eleventh of October, 1733, his first cousin, Maria Cuyler, daughter of Elsie Ten Broeck and Johannes Cuyler.

He was a member of the Council Board of the city, and from 1762 till 1766 was particularly active.

In 1726 the Council had vested in the King of England's name a large tract of land in western New York, "for the protection of free Indian Rights and Trade." Sir Jeffrey Amherst had disregarded this, and granted to a company of men ten thousand acres of it. The latter had followed up the opportunity to monopolize the Indian trade.

The merchants and men of Albany determined to resist this interference. Accordingly, a petition was resorted to, which bears date January the twenty-eighth, 1762, signed by the prominent men, begging that these grants in western New York might be annulled.⁵⁸ Cornelius Ten Broeck's name stands on this list.

Two years later, a second petition was issued to the English Trade Commissioners, asking for the appointment of certain places or posts where the Indians could be met for traffic. Again Cornelius Ten Broeck used his influence for mutual safety and protection.⁵⁹

He requested permission to purchase a tract of land from the Indian owners, in Albany County, on the south side of the Mohawk River. In July, 1765, Sir William Johnson signified this to be a bona fide purchase.

Cornelius Ten Broeck made his Will on March the thirteenth, 1771. It was recorded in Albany the twenty-ninth of April, 1773. Among its provisions he mentioned this grant, and devised it to his grandson, Cornelius Ten Broeck, Junior.

He was married first, at Kinderhook, on the twenty-eighth of June, 1743, to Catharina Conyn. She was the mother of all his children. His second marriage took place when he was about sixty years of age.

Dirck W. Ten Broeck was an unyielding patriot of the Revolution, and several times represented the manor of Livingston in the Provincial Assembly. The Assembly of New York, under the first Constitution, was composed of twenty-four members. They met at Kingston, September the ninth, 1777, and the following month were dispersed by the British troops. Dirck W. Ten Broeck was a member of this session, as also of the second, which was held at Poughkeepsie the year following. He was continued the Representative⁶⁰ until 1783.

He was an intimate friend of the two Robert Livingstons, lords of the upper and lower manors.

The bouwerie of his grandfather, Dirck Wesselse, with its tract of twelve hundred acres on the Roelof Jansen Kil, became his property, partly by inheritance from his father and partly by purchase from the heirs of his uncle, Tobias Ten Broeck.

He had a new dwelling erected on this estate, but whether the old frame-house was entirely removed or was left to form the rear extension to the new one, cannot be positively known. The hipped roof and apparent antiquity of the extension suggest the latter, and it is borne out by the relative measurements. The new brick house is forty-eight feet wide, and extends back twenty-five feet to where it meets the frame portion. The latter has a width of forty feet by a depth of thirty-one.

The frontispiece represents the place as it appears today ; between the windows can be plainly seen the date of building, 1762. This plate is from a silhouette executed by Albertina (140), the daughter of Dirck W. Ten Broeck, and gives a quaint picture of the house and barns more than one hundred years ago.

This dwelling, with part of the original tract of land, is still in the possession of a lineal descendant, Mrs. Harold Wilson, of Clermont, New York.

Tradition says the bricks were brought from Holland. An ancient brass knocker adorns the door, on opening which we find the house as the period of building suggests — a wide hallway, with spacious rooms on either side. Up to the roof itself can be seen the firm, substantial material and workmanship which the passing of four generations has not impaired. The heavy timbers are of hand-hewed oak, and each piece bears the Roman number denoting its place in the structure ; and strange to our modern sight are the oaken pins which hold each crossbeam and brace in position. At either end, high up toward the hipped roof, are the port-holes, which were used in the every-day emergencies of that time.

The house stands on a slight rise of ground above the banks of the clear water of the Kil. It overlooks the quiet, green meadows, or "flatts," which are an important part of the fertile and beautiful lands comprising the estate.

Dirck W. Ten Broeck died at his bouwerie, and was interred in the place of family burial. Near this was the space allotted to the slaves, and they were a goodly retinue for even those times.

near the public highway, is pointed out the racecourse, where the Ten Broecks and the Livingstons found their chief recreation. None had a better eye for the points of a fine horse, and the best were sure to be found in their stables.

The records of this family are found in the Dutch Bible now owned by a descendant,— Mrs. Charles P. Sanders, of Scotia, N. Y. The plate represents the title-page.

The book was printed in Dordrecht in the year 1719. It is one of those heavy folio volumes bound in boards, covered with tooled leather, and finished with corner-pieces and clasps of brass. It contains marginal references and footnotes; numerous plates, engraved by Jonkman, illustrative of gospel scenes, are fitted, block-like, to cover full pages; each one is small,— about three inches square,— and they are both quaint and amusing.

CHRISTINA TEN BROECK (74).

Christina, the youngest child of Samuel Ten Broeck (14) became the wife of Harmanus Schuyler on the fourth of September, 1754.

He was at that time a jeweler in Albany, and held the position of constable. He soon became assistant alderman, followed, in June, 1761, by the appointment as sheriff of Albany County. He held this office until 1770, when he removed with his family to Stillwater.

In February, 1776, he was made Assistant Deputy Commissary-General of the Northern Department, and was stationed at Lake George, in charge of men engaged in building boats for the use of the Army. He finally retired from the service, and died at Stillwater on September the first, 1796.

His wife Christina and seven children survived him. The sons followed the father's example in devoting their services to the country. The eldest, Nicholas (166) became a surgeon; the second, Samuel (167) was a clerk in the Commissary Department; and Dirck (169) became Second Lieutenant in one of the companies of the New York line.

The distinction of entertaining Washington fell to the lot of Christina's eldest daughter, Elsie. She was a woman of more than ordinary beauty of person, dignified in manner, and self-possessed.

In July, 1783, General Washington, escorted by Governor Clinton and General Schuyler, was on a tour of inspection of the battlefields of Saratoga and the Mohawk Valley. On their arrival at Stillwater they sought entertainment at the Schuyler-Ten Broeck residence.

Christina was absent from home, and upon her daughter devolved the honor of receiving the General as a guest. The party remained overnight, and when the hour for departure arrived, Washington, with his habitual courtesy, took Elsie's hand and raised it to his lips.

This was never forgotten. Nearly fifty years later, when her youngest nephew called to pay his respects, and was about to kiss her lips, she held up her hand and said: "Not my lips, George, but my hand, once kissed by Washington!"⁶¹ Elsie Schuyler was at that time the bride of Dr. Nicholas N. Bogart, who died within a few weeks. Some years later she married Major James Van Rensselaer of Albany.

DIRCK WESSELE TEN BROECK (75).

Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck married, on the thirteenth of June, 1740, Catharina Rutsen, of Kingston. He lived but a short time, and there were no children by the marriage.

In June, 1749, his widow, Catharina, was married to Petrus, son of John Ten Broeck and Rachel Roosa, and grandson of Wessel Wesselse Ten Broeck (2), of Kingston.

Petrus Ten Broeck was a citizen of Rhinebeck, and upon the opening of the Revolution at once took an active part. He was commissioned Colonel of the Rhinebeck militia, and chosen deputy to the Provincial Congress of November, 1775. He was also Secretary of the Committee of War,⁶² and later bore the title of General.

His death occurred on March the fifth, 1777. His wife survived him five years. Their Wills are on file in the office of the clerk of the Court of Appeals, Albany. There is no mention made of children.

JOHANNES TEN BROECK (78).

Johannes was born at Albany, September, 1719, and soon after attaining the age of manhood he came to East New Jersey.

Through the influence of the Dutch from the upper Hudson, New Brunswick had been incorporated in 1730. The Indian pathway from the Delaware River to the sea had become the king's highway, and an outlet for the commerce of the region. Three miles above the town, at the head of the sloop-navigation waters of the Raritan River, was a station known as Raritan Landing, which was described as "a market for the most plentiful wheat country of its bigness in America." Here Johannes, either for himself or in company with his parents, purchased a tract of land.

In 1748 lotteries were numerous in New Jersey; there was scarcely a town that did not seek to enrich itself by such means. The objects were various — to complete a church, to erect a parsonage, or to relieve distress, public or private. In this year Johannes Ten Broeck advertised a lottery at Raritan Landing, and offered his real estate as the prizes.⁶³ However the scheme succeeded, Johannes retained over two hundred and twenty-five acres of the land, and it became the family home for three generations.

He had married on the thirtieth of January, 1746, Patientie (Patience), the eldest child of William Williamson, who was a citizen of prominence and also a Church-master of the Dutch Church of New Brunswick. They resided on the farm at Raritan Landing.

Those were unquiet times, and the last colonial war, the one which ended the rule of France in the colonies, was declared in 1756. Between 1758 and 1761 the New Jersey Assembly increased its quota of fighting men from five hundred to one thousand. This force was detailed to "remove the enemy from the frontier." In addition to this, Johannes Ten Broeck raised a company, which consisted of sixty-one men and three officers. He was commissioned the Captain on the seventh of April, 1761.

The troops of this section were called "Jersey Blues." The name is said to be due to the fact that a certain volunteer company were furnished with "tow frocks and pantaloons dyed blue" by the patriotic women. Is it a marvel that they proved singularly efficient in the days of trial ?

The company of Johannes Ten Broeck was incorporated into Colonel Samuel Hunt's regiment of Jersey Blues, and was reserved for special garrison duty.⁶⁴

Fort Oswego, the natural gateway between the enemy in Canada and the colonies, had been reinforced in 1755 by the erection of Fort Ontario on the east side of Onondaga River. This was built by Governor Shirley as a defense against the attacks and advances of the French and Indians.

Johannes Ten Broeck and his company "embarked" for this point on the fourth of June, 1761. They were on duty in this fort sixteen months, and doubtless continued in the service until the definite treaty was concluded at Paris in February, 1763. In accordance with the proclamation of this year (1763), Captain Ten Broeck received a grant of three thousand acres of land, in recognition of his services. The confirmation of the grant was never sought.

His pay-rolls are in the possession of Mr. Frank La Rue Ten Broeck, of Asbury Park, N. J. They each bear upon the face the date, month by month, and the names of the men comprising the company, noting the changes which occur and the amount due each one for service. On the reverse is found the signatures of the men, upon receipt of the monthly payment, and also the date at which the examining committee certified the correctness of the paper.

The powder-horn carried by Captain Ten Broeck bears the etchings which are a feature of the horns of that period, the markings and names portraying the route of their march to the frontier. This is now owned by Mrs. Katharine M. Joralemon, of Newark. N. J.

Whether John Ten Broeck, who in the Revolutionary War was advanced from the position of Captain to that of First Major and Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fourth Hunterdon County, N. J., Regiment, is the Johannes of this colonial service, has not yet been proven. The state papers of the Revolutionary period lack the autograph, and many family papers have been destroyed and mislaid.

The Dutch Church of New Brunswick was the religious home of this family, although they continued to reside at The Landing. Johannes Ten Broeck died at the homestead, and was buried there, near the King's highway, on the east side of the river. The land passed out of the family in the third generation, and each year the husbandman encroaches, little by little, upon the space where once stood many stones inscribed with the heart history of this branch of the family.

Governor Livingston, on February the fifteenth, 1790, granted to Peter and Van Rensselaer Ten Broeck letters of administration on their father's estate.

After the death of Johannes, his wife took up her residence with their eldest son William, in New Brunswick, where she died in January, 1800. Her Will was made on January the fifteenth, 1796. It was recorded the twenty-fifth of February, 1800, and is on file at Trenton, N. J., Book 39. The following extracts from it may prove of interest to the descendants: "I will and bequeath unto my son, William Ten Broeck . . . the

Her executors were her son William, and her daughter, Mary Ten Broeck.

It may not be amiss to state that Johannes Ten Broeck anglicized his entire name, writing it John Ten Brook, but only for a short time did his descendants follow his example in simplifying the spelling of the last word.

CORNELIS TEN BROECK (83).

Cornelis, the sixth son of Johannes Ten Broeck and Catelyna Van Rensselaer, was born at Albany the fourteenth of May, 1727.

It seems not improbable that in early manhood he came to New Jersey, as he married Maria Bodyn, whose parents in both branches were Huguenots and New Jersey settlers. After their marriage they resided at Claverack and Kinderhook, and the baptisms of most of their children are recorded at the Claverack Dutch Church.

It is almost impossible for us to realize the dangers and troubles occasioned in colonial days by the disputes over both public and private divisions of lands. History traces for us the progress of the long and bitter feud regarding the boundary between Massachusetts and New York.

In the section of country familiar to our ancestors, dissatisfaction was chiefly due to two causes, the persistence of certain men from Massachusetts who claimed parts of the Livingston manor, and to the exaction of quit rents.

These rents were the conditioned stipulations of grants of land from the Governor, an acknowledgment, so to speak, of his rights as grantor. Large tracts upon which arrears of quit rents had accumulated were sold from time to time to satisfy these claims.

Riots were the outgrowth of these grievances, and frequently the magistrates and local militia were compelled to subdue them. In such an affray, on the twenty-sixth of June, 1766, it is believed that Cornelis Ten Broeck met his death.⁶⁵

The following record of the children's births and baptisms is in possession of Mrs. Robert Dunscombe Swartwout, Stamford, Conn.

JOHN TOBIAS TEN BROECK (92).

He was born at the bouwerie on the Roelof Jansen Kil, on the seventeenth of October, 1722. Fifteen months later his father died, and in a few years his mother had married a second time. These events, doubtless, separated the family from the Ten Broecks.

When John Tobias became of age, as the heir-at-law and devisee of his father he sold his equal one-half portion of the eighteen hundred acres of the bouwerie to his cousin Dirck W. Ten Broeck (68), for the sum of three thousand Spanish milled dollars. The papers bear the date of the seventh of December, 1743.

It is said he then removed to New Jersey. On the fifteenth of August, 1745, he married Elizabeth Oothout, of New York City. They had a family of twelve children, but the only two sons died before reaching the age of twelve years. Thus the family name in this line terminated in this generation.

THE FIFTH GENERATION.

CATRYNA TEN BROECK (102).

Catryna was baptized at Albany on the fourth of September, 1715, when three days old. We are fortunate in having a copy of her portrait in childhood. The original is in the possession of Miss Katharine Livingston Smith, of Argyle, New York—a lineal descendant through her daughter, Catharine (220). In the left-hand corner of the canvas there is inscribed in red letters :

ÆTAT^s SUA. One would never imagine it to be
3 YEARS. the likeness of a child of only that 1719. age. The description of Holmes's
"Dorothy Q" fits our little maid wonderfully well :

Grandmother's mother : her age, I guess,
Thirteen summers, or something less ;
Girlish bust, but womanly air ;
Smooth, square forehead, with uprolled hair ;

Lips that never a lover has kissed ;
 Taper fingers, and slender wrist ;
 Hanging sleeves of stiff brocade —
 So they painted the little maid.

On her hand a parrot green
 Sits unmoved and broods serene.
 Look not on her with eyes of scorn ;
 Dorothy Q was a lady born !

One thinks of her maidenhood as full of manifold and varied duties and pleasures, for she was the eldest of a family of twelve children. At the age of twenty-four she became the wife of John Livingston, of Albany, the third son of Robert Livingston and Margarita Schuyler. She shared with him the varied experiences of more than fifty years of married life.

They resided for a time in Montreal, Canada, but when the Revolution commenced they removed to Stillwater, New York. They had probably both inherited portions of the Saratoga Patent, and thus it became their permanent home from this time. On the fifth of March, 1784, Catryna received from her husband the "Power of Attorney for all Saratoga lands devised to her by her father, Dirck Ten Broeck, or her brother, Dirck Ten Broeck ; and all or any claim in a patent called Lokermans." ⁶⁶

John Livingston died at Stillwater, in 1791, and his wife then returned to Albany, and found a home with her daughter, Catharine (220), the wife of Dr. Elias Willard. She was here shown every considerate kindness due the aged parent.

It is said Catryna never spoke the English language. A description of the ceremonious visits the children of the family paid their grandmother is still repeated among the descendants. On New Year's, the only day of the year on which the grandchildren were permitted to visit her apartments, they came with the greatest delight, mingled with awe. The low curtsy was made, and their greetings spoken in Dutch taught them for the occasion!

Catryna died at her daughter's house on Broadway, Albany, April the sixth, 1801.

Her ancient Dutch Bible and Psalm Book are now the property of Mrs. Israel Smith, of Williamsburg, Va. The former was purchased on the twentieth of November, 1728, according to the inscription, but it contains no records. The Psalm Book was printed in 1725, and probably belonged to her father, as on the final page is written, "Dirck Ten Broeck, syn Boock, 1732." Her own name is on the cover of the book, in this form:

CHRISTINA TEN BROECK (104).

Christina, the third child of Dirck Ten Broeck, of Albany, was born on the thirtieth of December, 1718.

On the fourteenth of April, 1740, she married Philip Livingston, who was a cousin to John Livingston, the husband of her eldest sister.

Philip Livingston was born at Albany January the fifteenth, 1716. He was graduated from Yale College in 1737, and after his marriage resided in New York City. He was an alderman for several years, and in 1759 was elected member of the Provincial Assembly. This was the opening of a career that was at the same time illustrious and honorable. His position in the Continental Congress and his signature to the Declaration of Independence would, of themselves, make his name widely known.

He died at York, Pennsylvania, on June the twelfth, 1778, where Congress was then assembled. Christina, his honored wife for nearly forty years, survived him, and died in Albany, June the twenty-ninth, 1801. Her will was made on April the twenty-fourth, 1800, and recorded in Albany County in November, 1801.

A portrait of Christina Ten Broeck, painted in her second year, hangs in the hallway of the Van Rensselaer mansion at Greenbush, N. Y. A second portrait was painted when growth of character and wideness of experience had changed the expression of the round baby face, and the child had become the wife of a distinguished man. This is in the possession of Mrs. Crosby, of New York City, who is also a descendant.

ABRAHAM TEN BROECK (111).

This man, who performed great services for the colony and became of such note in the country, was the tenth of a family of twelve children.

He was born the thirteenth of May, 1734, and baptized when six days old, in the church of his ancestors,—the Reformed Church of America,—his sponsors being his eldest sister, Catryna (102), and his maternal grandfather, Abraham Cuyler. His early life was passed in Albany, his native city; he was then sent to New York, and educated as a merchant in the counting-room of Philip Livingston, who had married his sister Christina (104), and whose name is famous as a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

On the completion of his mercantile education he made a tour of the Eastern provinces, and immediately thereafter returned to his native city to establish himself in business.

He married the first of November, 1763, Elizabeth, the only daughter of Stephen Van Rensselaer, Patroon of Rensselaerwyck. At the death of the latter, Abraham Ten Broeck was chosen trustee of the estate during the minority of the boy patroon. For sixteen years he superintended the vast property with great ability, so that he was enabled to deliver it into the hands of its next proprietor in an improved condition.

His first call to public duty came when he was chosen a member of the Colonial Assembly in 1761, where he represented the manor of Rensselaerwyck. In this position he used his influence in favor of popular rights,⁶⁷ until the opening of the Revolutionary struggle in 1775.

He was found among the militia at the beginning of the war, and on March the twenty-first, 1775, was elected by the Committee of Correspondence to represent the city and county of Albany at the Provincial Convention to be assembled in New York City the twentieth of April.⁶⁸ At this Convention he was appointed a delegate to the Continental Congress, to be held in Philadelphia the following month.

GENERAL ABRAHAM TEN BROECK.
From the Oil-Painting of 1799.

A notable resolution which these delegates adopted during the Congress of May, 1775, and which the signature of Abraham Ten Broeck indorsed, is as follows:—
“To oppose the arbitrary and oppressive measures of the British Parliament, and to preserve Peace, Order, and Safety.” This Congress also ordered a Committee of Safety, of which Abraham Ten Broeck was made a member, to “report an arrangement of the Troops to be embodied for the defence of this Colony.”

The officers for the third regiment of the first battalion of Rensselaerwyck were elected on August the twenty-sixth, and the commissions issued October twentieth, 1775, Abraham Ten Broeck being named Colonel Commandant.⁶⁹

Early in the year 1776 he was made General, and in February was ordered, with the members of his Committee, to revise the Militia Law, and to prepare a Draft of Instructions for the Committee of War.⁷⁰ Can we not feel the quickened pulse and see the stress of danger in these rapidly repeated orders?

Before many months elapsed he received the position of Brigadier-General; thus was he placed in command of all militia in Dutchess and Ulster counties, and to the north and west of those boundaries.

During this year he was made President of the New York Convention of Representatives, and in December, 1776, this body decided to revive the Committee of Safety, of which he was also chosen President.⁷¹

John Hancock, President of the General Congress of Philadelphia, wrote to this Committee from Baltimore, February the twenty-fifth, 1777, asking for militia to reinforce General Washington's army, particularly to protect the passes in the Highlands. The following is General Ten Broeck's reply :

Mr. HANCOCK, President :

Sir :

Your favor of the 25th of February I have had the Honor of receiving and laying before the Convention. It is earnestly wished that the Army under the more immediate command of General Washington was augmented to the number intended by Congress; and that it was in the power of this State to station a competent force in the Highlands and West Chester County, to defend the Passes and protect the Inhabitants from the insults of the Enemy.

This State, Sir, has cheerfully sustained Burthens during the Summer and Winter Champaigns, far beyond her strength. Her losses of Men and Labour are severely felt, and the incessant calls upon the Militia have become a Greviance which is no longer tolerable.

The Convention flattered themselves that the large army provided for the Defence of the United States would have rendered their Services, except on very urgent and Sudden Emergencies, unnecessary, and have given Repose to the Husbandman and the Artificer. It is therefore with equal Pain and Disappointment that the Convention views the Resolution of the honorable Congress to draw all the Continental Battalions raised in this State, to the Westward, and to leave our Militia to the accumulated Charge of garrisoning the Passes and of defending the Country against the Inroads and Ravages of the Enemy, who from Fort Independence and Kings bridge continue to carry on a predatory war, to captivate and carry off our best friends, destroy their effects, and beat off the feeble Guards which we are able to maintain. No less than sixty of our Rangers, surprised by a Superior Force, fell into their Hands this week; besides the Chairman of the County Committee and several of his Friends and Family.

What, Sir, under these circumstances must be the Feelings of our Inhabitants should their Quota of the Continental Troops according to the Proposition, be drawn off from their Assistance, at a time too, when it is generally expected that a more vigorous attack will be made upon the exposed Frontiers of this State.

I am directed, Sir, to call your attention to the repeated Exertions of our Militia.

This letter is only one of an important correspondence, and Abraham Ten Broeck was as wise in active service as in deliberation.

When Burgoyne was defeated at Saratoga, in October, 1777, it is said "the bravest men of Albany County were there under General Ten Broeck"; and a second account gives the following:

General Enoch Poor, with his New Hampshire men, and General Abraham Ten Broeck with three thousand New Yorkers, faced unmoved the cannon and grape-shot with which they were greeted, as, emerging from the wood, they fell fiercely upon the British left. The dash and courage of the Americans amazed and appalled the haughty Britons. They poured a deadly fire upon each flank, then closed, and grappling hand-to-hand, the mad mass swayed to and fro for half an hour, five times taking and retaking a single gun.

In another description of the Battle of Bemis Heights we read:

Fraser fell, mortally wounded, in this assault, and swiftly behind the half-crazy volunteers came Ten Broeck with a force nearly double that of the whole British line. That line was now in full retreat.⁷²

General Ten Broeck was an intimate and beloved friend of General Washington, and was selected by him as his special companion on several important expeditions. On the evacuation of New York by the British, he was one of the Council appointed to receive possession.

He resigned the position of Brigadier-General on March the twenty-sixth, 1781, evidently not to retire from the duty of a servant and leader of his people, but that he might the more faithfully discharge his duty.⁷³

Two weeks previous to this the governor, George Clinton, had appointed him the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.⁷⁴ For a term of thirteen years he presided with great ability and distinction.

He was mayor of the city of Albany from Michaelmas, 1779, to 1783, and again from 1796 to 1799, and a member of the State Senate 1780 to 1783.

He was the first President of the Bank of Albany, and held the office from 1792 till 1799, when he declined a reëlection. At this time the directors, as a mark of esteem, had his portrait painted for their counting-house. It represents him in the act of signing bank bills. From it has been reproduced the illustration here given.

The story of the original is as follows: At a sale of the assets of the bank, Mr. Thomas Worth Olcott purchased the painting and removed it to adorn the wall of the Ten Broeck mansion in Albany, which he at that time owned, and where he resided. Upon his death the portrait became the property of his son, Mr. Frederick P. Olcott. The latter presented it to the city, as an addition to the valuable collection of portraits of the mayors of Albany; it now hangs in the Council Chamber of the new City Hall.

General Ten Broeck's residence formerly stood at Broadway and Columbia streets, Albany, looking south and stretching across Broadway. It was destroyed by the great fire of 1797. In order to insure his home against future conflagrations, he purchased a tract of land quite above and outside the thickly-settled portion of the city, had bricks imported from Holland, and erected the house that is now in as good condition as when he removed to it. It stands on Ten Broeck Street, in grounds that occupy the square block; facing the east, the entrance is from Ten Broeck Place.

The view here given is of the southeast front of the mansion. High on the south end can be seen the iron figures, "1798," as the General had them placed at the time of building. On the north end are the letters (his wife's name being Elizabeth), in Colonial ornamental script. Entering the house, we find ourselves in a spacious hall, through which one passes to reach the winding stairway. A few steps further leads to the hall-door of the west entrance; here is seen a fine example of the Dutch stoop, the roof being supported by Doric columns and the sides inclosed by massive lattice.

Abraham Ten Broeck had lived and died a devout and consistent member of the Dutch Church. His death occurred on the nineteenth of January, 1810. He was buried with military honors, and added to this was the greater tribute of personal affection and respect attested by the large concourse of citizens.

His will, made on the twenty-seventh of March, 1809, was recorded the third of February, 1810, at Albany.

DIRCK TEN BROECK (113).

The youngest child of Dirck Ten Broeck (20) and Margarita Cuyler was born the twenty-sixth of July, 1738. He was named for his father, and became a merchant in his native city. He married on November the twenty-fifth, 1761, Ann Douw. There is no record of children, but Richard Ten Broeck, mentioned at the end of the seventh generation, may have been a descendant.

Dirck Ten Broeck was appointed a fire-master of Albany in 1769, and was active in the interests of the city and colony from this time until his death.⁷⁵

When the commissions were issued on the twentieth of October, 1775, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Regiment of the City of Albany. He was also Commissioner of the Continental Loan Office, but was compelled to resign in the year 1779 on account of ill health.⁷⁶

On the third of March, 1780, he resigned his position of Commander of the City Troop, and died the twenty-ninth day of May following, having only reached the age of forty-two.

His will, made in 1765, was probated in Albany June the twenty-sixth, 1780. He left all his estate, real and personal, to his wife, but in the event of her remarrying there was a reservation in favor of his own brother Abraham and sisters.

PETRUS TEN BROECK (125).

Petrus, the son of Jacob Ten Broeck (26) and Christina Van Alen, married on the thirty-first of March, 1750, Annatje Herchheimer (Herkimer). Through his marriage he was allied to the most influential Germans in the Mohawk Valley, as his wife was a sister of General Nicholas Herkimer, of Revolutionary fame.

The residence was in Montgomery County, N. Y., as the names and dates of baptism of several of his children stand on the register of the church at Stone Arabia. His name is entered as Major Petrus Ten Broeck at the baptism of the third son, in 1771, showing his standing in the militia at that date.

Under date of October, 1776, he is unfortunately found associated with Johan Jost Schuyler in the following: "Peter Ten Broeck, of the Fall Kill, joined the enemy. He, with Han Yost Schuyler and about twelve others, went to Oswego, hoping to meet the enemy there."⁷⁷ A shade more light is thrown on this event by a letter to General Schuyler, which relates how, "After a consultation at Canajoharie Castle among the Indians and Tories, they absconded to the enemy."

It is doubtful if this plan carried, as Schuyler and others, to the number of twenty-eight, were captured. Major Ten Broeck probably even found a way to avoid being a refugee, as on January the tenth, 1780, he presented his youngest child for baptism at the Germantown Church, Columbia County.

These few unconnected facts regarding the life of Petrus Ten Broeck leave many unsolved problems in their wake, and trace of his children, beyond the following list, cannot be found.

JOHANNES TEN BROECK (134).

Johannes, the only son of Cornelis Ten Broeck (27) and Maria Cuyler, was born the twenty-seventh of July, 1740. He was a merchant in Albany, and immediately upon his majority, his name appears in connection with municipal affairs.

He was a member of Common Council in 1766. In September, 1773, he was a loyal candidate for alderman from the third ward; he was elected, but owing to bitter partizanship his seat was contested. Only after a warm dispute was he allowed to occupy the position.⁷⁸

As a magistrate of Albany he took part in the decisions, and signed the deed whereby the city gave a new title to the Indians for the Tiononderoga Patent, thus carrying out the wish and intent of his father and other merchants of Albany, as expressed by petition twenty years earlier.

The measures of defense resorted to in 1775 in preparation for the Revolution were partly under his supervision, because of his position as a public officer. In addition, he was chosen member of the "Committee of Safety," and delegated to coöperate with General Schuyler in devising and executing the most effective measures for repelling the enemy on the northern and western frontiers.⁷⁹ His faithfulness as a member of this committee is attested by his constant attendance on all the numerous meetings of the organization. He was a delegate to the third and fourth Provincial Congresses. He served Albany County as sheriff in 1781 and 1786, and was a member of the House of Assembly in 1792.⁸⁰

He had married, on the twelfth of June, 1762, Sara Gansevoort, of Albany. To them were born eleven children, eight of whom died unmarried, some in childhood and others in middle age. His wife died in 1811, and his death occurred on the twenty-sixth of December, 1822.

SAMUEL TEN BROECK (135).

Samuel, the eldest child of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck (68), was born at the Roelof Jansen Kil homestead on the twenty-seventh of September, 1745; his paternal grandparents were sponsors at his baptism, as recorded in the family Bible. On the leaves of the same record is found his own entry of his marriage on the twelfth of August, 1768, to "Emitie Van Alsteyn."

He was in the full vigor of manhood when the clouds of war with England settled over the colonies, and at once he appeared as a representative of his district. He assisted in the choice of the delegate from Albany County to the Provincial Congress, which met in New York in May, 1775, and when the commissions were issued in October following, he was appointed Second Major of Colonel Peter R. Livingston's Regiment, the Tenth of the New York Militia.⁸¹

He was commissary for his district, and superintended the sending of supplies furnished by the farmers to Barrytown, at which point they were available for shipment.

In this section there was established a system of vigilance known as "The Night Watch," for protection against the Tories and secret enemies of the colonists. The following account is taken from the fragment of an old book which contained a journal of their proceedings:⁸²

That the night watch shall consist of eighty-four men, to be divided into seven sub-divisions. That twelve men be the guard for each night, exclusive of the officers. That the night watch be kept at Samuel Ten Broeck's, and shall consist of twenty-eight men, which number is to be divided into seven companies.

We are thus shown how his home became the center of interest as well as a place of defense.

After the close of the war, the laws of the State provided for a National Guard. Samuel Ten Broeck was then appointed General of Militia, and was thereafter called by this title. As a citizen he was much esteemed for his benevolence and high character.

He was elected member of Assembly from Albany County in 1781, and for two terms he filled this position with general acceptance.⁸³

He built a substantial, handsome house upon land which was part of the original Ten Broeck bouwerie; the time of completion is approximately known by the lettering upon the massive wrought-iron fire-back, which bears the initials of himself and wife in this fashion: The wide hallway customary at this period forms an imposing, spacious room; the slender 1773 Colonial balustrade of mahogany and the
 E. stairway are of unique style; but the most
 S. T. B. curious and interesting are the heavy oaken timbers and beams which support the hipped-roof.

Within a few years after building, General Henry Livingstone purchased this place and gave it the name of "Calendar House," after family estates in Scotland, which name it still bears. Samuel Ten Broeck then returned to the homestead on the Roelof Jansen Kil.

His portrait, painted in 1832, together with the cane, is in possession of his grand-niece, Mrs. Albertina S. Mynderse, of Schenectady, N. Y. The sword shown, crossed with the cane, was the one used by the General during the Revolution. His seal is owned by his grand-nephew, Mr. Walter T. L. Ten Broeck, Rhinebeck, N. Y.

General Ten Broeck had no descendants. His wife lived until their married years had numbered sixty-six. The inscription which marks her resting-place reads :

In memory of Emma Ten Broeck, who died June 24, 1834, aged 84 years, 8 mos. and 13 days.

In faith she died, in dust she lies;
But faith foresees that dust shall rise
When Christ, with His Almighty word,
Calls his dead saints to meet their Lord.

Seven years later her husband was buried by her side in the Ten Broeck family lot, and the stone marking the spot bears the story of his life in these words :

In memory of Samuel Ten Broeck, who died May 30, 1841, aged 95 years, 7 months and 22 days.

His usefulness in Church and State
Was early known to men.
Blest with an active life till late
And happy in his end.

LEONARD TEN BROECK (137).

He was one of the foremost men among the Ten Broecks of the Livingston Manor district to bear arms in the struggle for Independence.

"CALENDAR HOUSE."
Built by General Samuel Ten Broeck about 1773.

In the earliest arrangement of troops Leonard Ten Broeck was a First Lieutenant in the Albany County Regiment. In October, 1775, his commission confirmed this rank, placing him in command of the First Company. The regiment was then called the Tenth of the New York Militia.⁸⁴ In the report of the Committee on Arrangement of Regiments in 1777, he was reported and approved as still serving in the same rank.

He fought bravely throughout the perilous days, and his gallantry at the taking of Burgoyne is a matter of history.

It appears that threads of love were woven in this strand of patriotism, for on the seventh of March, 1776, was issued his marriage license with Gertrude, the daughter of Jacob Schermerhorn. Four sons and four daughters were born to them.

Leonard Ten Broeck was a man who commanded high respect and confidence, and as his life rounded out to more than four-score years, he seemed by reason of his age to be the connecting link between two centuries of history.

His death occurred two years before that of his wife. They were laid side by side in the little burying-ground at the Ten Broeck homestead on Roelof Jansen's Kil, where others of the family had been interred before.

His memorial was written thus :

Leonard Ten Broeck,
who died November 11, 1836, aged 84 years and 1 day.

This spot contains the ashes of the just,
Who sought no honours and betray'd no trust.
This truth he prov'd in every path he trod,
" An honest man 's the noblest work of God."

The lettering on his wife's stone reads,

In memory of Gertrude Ten Broeck, wife of Leonard Ten Broeck,

Who died September 2, 1838,
aged 82 years 10 months and 19 days.

Mourn not as those whose hopes expire
When death has quenched the vital fire;

Shall spring through Him who died to save.

ALBERTINA TEN BROECK (SANDERS).
From the Oil-Portrait of 1832.

299 VIII LEONARD WILLIAM, born February 14, 1797; died January 24, 1852; married October 11, 1820, Helen, born May 3, 1796, died September 21, 1855, daughter of Walter Tryon Livingston and his first wife, Eliza Platner.

ALBERTINA TEN BROECK (140).

Albertina was born at the bouwerie, on the Roelof Jansen Kil, on November the twenty-third, 1760, and was married there in 1799.

The former date suggests that she was born before the house erected by Major Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck (3) had given place to the present one, which was built by his grandson. This suggestion seems to meet with confirmation from the fact that Albertina executed two silhouettes of the place (see pages 26 and 66) in which the houses differed, although the scene was similar.

Together with the pictures have descended their traditional titles. According to these, the one with the cornucopia represents the house of Major Ten Broeck, built in the early days of the eighteenth century; the other gives the family arms for the center, and below are the house and barns built by her father, in 1762, and familiar to Albertina as she grew into womanhood.

Underneath the second silhouette can be read the words, "Welcome every Friendly Guest," which set forth the spirit of hospitality for which the name of Ten Broeck has always stood synonymous.

It is said Albertina Ten Broeck injured her eyesight in making these pictures, which are cut with the most minute care.

She married John Sanders, of Scotia. He had served among the Minute Men of 1777, when, under command of Captain Fonda, they compelled the surrender of "Johnson Hall." He was Senator under the first Constitution of New York, from 1799 till 1802, inclusive; a member of the Council of Correspondence in 1800, and also a member of the convention to form the second Constitution, adopted in 1822.⁸⁵

Judge Sanders was a gentleman of the old school. In his dress he adhered to the customs of the last century — small-clothes, silk stockings, and shoes with silver buckles. His was a manner full of kindness and hospitable friendliness, but he was withal noted for his dignity, resolution, and courage.

Scotia was the title of the estates of the family. By the marriage of John Sanders, Senior, to Deborah Glen, in 1739, this large estate, belonging until then to the Glens, was merged into the Sanders name, and the joint Glen and Sanders line.

The house at Scotia, to which John Sanders, Junior, took his bride, Albertina Ten Broeck, had been built by John A. Glen in 1713, on the left bank of the Mohawk River, about three quarters of a mile above Schenectady. It had been rendered defensible during the French wars, and must have been in the path of many stirring and warlike expeditions.

Albertina and John Sanders passed the happy years of a long married life here, and are buried almost within its shadow, in the Sanders family burial-place. Their descendants still own and occupy the mansion.

Their portraits, painted by Phillips in 1832, are owned

ANTHONY TEN BROECK (148).

Anthony Ten Broeck, of Claverack, married first, on the thirteenth of October, 1782, his second cousin, Christina Ten Broeck (197). His family of eleven children are by this alliance. Six years after the death of Christina, he married for his second wife Mrs. Maria Heermance, who outlived him many years.

Anthony died on October the twelfth, 1832. His will bears the date of the same year as his death, and is recorded at Hudson, New York,

SAMUEL J. TEN BROECK (153).

Samuel, the son of Johannes Ten Broeck (72), of Hudson, N. Y., married his first cousin Maria, the daughter of Jeremias Ten Broeck (73). In his father's will he is called Samuel, but in that of his father-in-law his name is written Samuel J. (which probably referred to his father's name, Johannes, as was the prevalent custom), and he himself added this initial when witnessing a deed in 1806, thus proving it his legal signature.

He was among the men of this district who enlisted for the Revolutionary service, and was commissioned Captain in the Tenth Regiment of the New York Militia on October the twentieth, 1775.⁸⁶ The year following he was made Second Lieutenant-Colonel.

He belonged to one of the old families of Hudson, where his descendants still reside. He made his will on the third of May, 1834, and it was recorded in August, 1836, one year after his death.

SAMUEL J. TEN BROECK (159).

Samuel, the eldest of the seven children of Jeremiah Ten Broeck (73), was born the twenty-eighth of March, 1757. He, like his cousin Samuel (153), married one bearing the family name—his second cousin, Christina Ten Broeck (262).

He resided at Claverack, and when the young men of this section responded to the call to arms, although not of age, he entered the Ninth Company of the Livingston Manor Regiment—probably as Ensign. In the promotions of 1776 he was made Second Lieutenant.⁸⁷

He was entitled, according to the usage prevalent among those of Dutch ancestry, to adopt his father's initial J. for his own middle letter; accordingly, we find his will, which is recorded at Hudson, New York, and bears date of May the tenth, 1826, is written over his name as Samuel J. Ten Broeck, of Claverack. He died the twenty-fifth of April, 1830, and was buried at Claverack. In conformity with the act of February the second, 1848, Christina Ten Broeck received the pension accorded the widow of a lieutenant in the Revolutionary war. She died probably in 1850.

ADAM TEN BROECK (160).

Adam, the second son of Jeremiah Ten Broeck (73), was born on July the twenty-fourth, 1759. Before he reached the age of manhood the spirit of the times drew him into active military service. Among the men of his own town he was chosen to bear the standard for the Fourth Company, Eighth Regiment of the First Claverack Battalion. He received his appointment as Ensign February the twenty-fifth, 1778, under Robert Van Rensselaer, Colonel Commandant.⁸⁸

He was a member, for a time, of Colonel Goosen Van Schaick's Regiment, the First of the New York line. After Independence was achieved he received a grant of land in recognition of his services.

He was an original member of the Society of the Cincinnati.⁸⁹

He married twice : first at Claverack, on May the thirtieth, 1784, to Lydia Maria Monson. By this alliance there were nine children. His second marriage was on the twenty-eighth of January, 1807, to Hannah Morrison, and five children were born to them.

Adam Ten Broeck died the thirtieth of May, 1826, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. His second wife, who was more than twenty years his junior, outlived him for a period of forty-four years. She died on April the seventeenth, 1870, at the age of ninety.

JOHN TEN BROECK (189).

Born at Raritan Landing on the tenth of September, 1757, he married Mary Ladner, who, at the age of fourteen, had become the wife of John Webster, and was now a widow of twenty-five, with two daughters, Sarah (vide 191) and Mary Webster.

John Ten Broeck brought his bride to the home of his youth, for the responsibility of the homestead rested largely upon him at this time. Three years later, upon the death of his father—in 1790—he became part owner of the property, and by purchase and deed from each of the other heirs, he kept it intact, and resided there until his death.⁹⁰

He died in the prime of life, shortly before reaching the age of forty-one, and was buried in the family lot on the place. The stone marking the spot bears the date of his death, August the eighteenth, 1798.

By his will, recorded in Trenton, N. J., Book 38, he devised the Ten Broeck homestead to his son John.

PETER TEN BROECK (190).

He was born at the Ten Broeck homestead, at Raritan Landing, on the fourth of September, 1760, and baptized in the Dutch Church of New Brunswick the seventh of December following.

Peter Ten Broeck was a lad of sixteen at the date of the battle of Trenton, and the frightful sounds of the artillery were among his most vivid recollections of that memorable time.

He crossed the line from Middlesex to Hunterdon County to find his bride, Ame (Emma), the daughter of Joseph Chamberlain, a man prominent in matters of both church and state in the township of Alexandria. They were married on the fourth of July, 1782. Very soon they went to Readington, in Hunterdon County, and purchased the property opposite the Dutch Church.

This church had been erected in 1738, although the congregation had been organized as early as 1717. In 1787 Rev. Peter Studdiford was called to the pastorate. During all the previous period the people had heard "the gospel undefiled in Holland Dutch," and although Dominie Studdiford did not understand the language, yet, upon accepting, he had engaged to study it sufficiently to preach in the Dutch tongue, occasionally, for the edification of the older people. This he essayed to do, but found it too difficult, and, to his relief, the Consistory kindly changed the terms of the "call."

Some of the congregation were very much displeased with this course, and one Sunday morning, having obtained possession of the key, locked the church door against the dominie. Peter Ten Broeck, who was a warm friend of the pastor, hearing that the church was locked against him, soon came up with an axe, and said to the malcontents, "If you do not open that door I will!" The door was opened, and the sermon was preached in English. The excitement soon died away, and the trouble about not preaching in Dutch was ended.⁹¹

"Emmy" Chamberlain Ten Broeck became a member of this church by certificate from the Presbyterian congregation at Alexandria. She died at Readington, but was buried with her father's family in the Alexandria churchyard. On the top of a flat table stone is this inscription:

Sacred to the memory of Emma,
Wife of Peter Ten Broeck, who departed this life December 5, 1805, in the 49th year of her age.

In life religion was her stay,
She in her dying hour,
By its triumphant power,
Hailed with joy the realms of day.

Peter Ten Broeck married again, on May the thirty-first, 1812, Catharine Emmons, of Readington, a woman of remarkable beauty. There were seven children by this second marriage, and Peter Ten Broeck lost his second wife two years before his death, which occurred on the twentieth of July, 1840. They were both buried under the shadow of the church. Their home is still owned by a descendant.

Letters of administration on his estate were granted to John Runk, a son-in-law, on the fifth of August, 1840.

Peter had outlived his brother Rensselaer (191), co-executor of the estate of their father, Captain John Ten Broeck (78), and a large store of family papers had come into his possession. These he guarded with most zealous care throughout his life, but unfortunately, during the "improvement" of the house which was made after his death they became scattered, and traces of few of them can be found. Doubtless, had these been preserved, many difficult questions, interesting alike to the family and to the public, might have been solved.

SAMUEL TEN BROECK (193).

The youngest child of Captain John Ten Broeck (78) studied medicine, and as a young man went to Shrewsbury, N. J., where he practised his profession throughout his life. His bright, genial manner made him a general favorite, and he was the trusted friend, as well as physician, of many families.

He became the possessor of much real estate, and his homestead is still to be seen on the beautiful avenue of that charming village.

He married on the fourth of June, 1797, Mary, the daughter of Edmund Williams — a family whose connections were among the best in Monmouth County. Seven children were born to them, but of the four sons only one lived until the age of manhood, and he also died, unmarried, in his twenty-second year.

Dr. Ten Broeck made his will in February, 1826. Three months later his wife, Mary, died, and before the end of the year following, the youngest daughter and eldest son were both taken from him by death. Influenced by these changes, on the eighth of January, 1828, he disposed of all his real estate by deed to his remaining children, share and share alike, with the confidence that they would "provide the grantor with every necessary convenience" as long as he should live.

Within a few months, on August the twenty-fourth, 1828, his own end came. He was buried in the ground of the Presbyterian churchyard at Shrewsbury, where also rest all his family, excepting the two eldest daughters.

The will and deeds disposing of the property are recorded at Freehold, N. J.

JOHN C. TEN BROECK (194).

He was the eldest child of Cornelis Ten Broeck (83) and Maria Bodyn. Born in Claverack the fifteenth of March, 1755, he was almost immediately taken to New Jersey, where his baptism is recorded in the Readington Dutch Church April the thirteenth. When he was about nine years of age his parents returned to the place of his birth, and there he grew up, and received the best education possible in those unsettled and exciting times.

At the breaking out of the war between England and the colonies he enlisted, and was commissioned First Lieutenant of the Sixth Company, First Regiment of the New York Continental line, on November the twenty-first, 1776. The regiment was commanded by his kinsman, Colonel Goosen Van Schaick (vide 203), and was composed of the flower of New York.⁹²

He distinguished himself as a brave soldier throughout the war, and was promoted to the captaincy June the twenty-ninth, 1781. He received the title of major as a brevet.

Major Ten Broeck was engaged in the battles of Trenton, Brandywine, and Monmouth. He shared the privations of Valley Forge, and it was at Yorktown that he received his only wound, being hit in the shoulder by a shell.

In preparation for the campaign of 1777 the First New York marched to the Mohawk Valley in answer to the summons of Colonel Marinus Willett, but the family tradition is that John C. Ten Broeck was in Fort Stanwix with Colonel Peter Gansevoort, and it is supposed he was specially detailed to attend him there at the time the invasion from Canada was impending.

Major Ten Broeck was an original member of the Society of the Cincinnati, and his place descended to the late Mr. William Ketchum, of Plattsburg, New York.⁹³

An ivory miniature of him is in possession of his great-granddaughter, Mrs. James Wilson, of Newark, N. J. This plate has been reproduced from an oil painting, an enlarged copy of the miniature, owned by Mr. Thomas Hillhouse, of New York. The uniform in which he was represented was probably that of some military organization to which he belonged before enlisting in the New York troops.

When peace was assured, Major Ten Broeck returned to the upper Hudson, and on the thirtieth of December, 1784, married his second cousin, Antje Ten Broeck (147). They resided at Hudson, New York.

Lafayette had commanded the division of troops to which Major Ten Broeck belonged, and when he visited the United States in 1825 the Major was very anxious to see his old commander. Learning that Lafayette was to pass from Albany to Troy on the Erie Canal, he took passage on the packet-boat, sought the General's presence, and recounted to him certain incidents of a review at Valley Forge: A party of distinguished Frenchmen had come to call upon their countryman in camp, and the General had ordered his troops to appear, in honor of the occasion. The officers had demurred, feeling they would make but a pitiable show, and begged they might be excused on account of the condition of their uniforms. But Lafayette had refused, saying, "Never mind your clothes. When I tell them of the battles you have fought they will not mind your clothes." To his great pleasure, General Lafayette at once remembered him. The Major delighted in telling the story of this meeting.⁹⁴

After the marriages of their children they finally took up their residence at Walnut Grove, the home of their son-in-law, Thomas Hillhouse, Senior, in the town of Water-vliet, Albany County, N. Y. Here Major Ten Broeck died on the tenth of August, 1835, and his wife outlived him less than three years. They were buried in the family vault on the estate, but when the property passed into the hands of strangers their remains were taken to the Hillhouse plot in Albany Rural Cemetery, where they now rest.

PETER BODINE TEN BROECK (196).

He was born the sixth of August, 1759, and named for his maternal grandfather. His baptism was by the Rev. Johannes Casparus Fryemoet. Although it is recorded that at times this clergyman went "on errands of strife to the congregation at Readington, New Jersey, and there baptized," yet the fact that the sponsors in this case were Jeremiah Ten Broeck and his wife points strongly to Claverack as the place. There were some of the Kingston branch of Ten Broecks in New Jersey at this time, but the name Jeremiah does not appear in their records.

The data referring to Peter B. Ten Broeck's life are very meagre. In May, 1789, he witnessed a deed, for the conveyance of land from John Van Rensselaer "to John Ten Broeck of the City of Hudson, yoeman."

Although very youthful for military service in the days of '76, he enlisted with the men of Albany County under Col. Robert Van Rensselaer.⁹⁵

A miniature representing him in uniform is owned by his niece in the third generation, Mrs. Henry Seaman Howard, of Stamford, Conn. It will be seen the uniform is similar to that worn by his brother, and probably the same artist painted both pictures.

There is no record of his ever having married.

MARIA TEN BROECK (203).

Maria was born in New Brunswick, N. J., the thirty-first of July, 1750, and on November the fifteenth, 1770, was married in New York City to Goosen Van Schaick. He was a descendant of the early colonist of Beverwyck, who, with others in 1662, resolved to form an agricultural settlement on the Esopus.

Goosen Van Schaick's first experience as a soldier was when he served under General Amherst in the French War. This was a preparation for the necessity of the Revolutionary days, when he was commissioned Colonel of the Second Regiment of the New York line. He was afterward General in the regular service, and held this rank at the time of his death, which occurred on July fourth, 1789.⁹⁶

Their seven children, with one exception, outlived their father many years, as did also his wife, Maria Ten Broeck Van Schaick, who died at Albany January the fifteenth, 1829.

SIXTH GENERATION.

RICHARD LIVINGSTON (215).

Richard Livingston grew into manhood at the time when young people in all Dutch families were encouraged to avoid the use of their hereditary tongue. In this way his baptismal name Dirck was gradually superseded by the English equivalent, Richard.

Through the removal of his parents to Montreal, in his youth, he made the acquaintance of and married a Canadian lady, Elizabeth Rencour.

He was Lieutenant-Colonel in his brother James's regiment, which first did service in Canada, and later in New York.

He died in March, 1784, and was buried at Stillwater, New York.

JAMES LIVINGSTON (216).

James, the son of John Livingston and Catharine Ten Broeck, was born the twenty-seventh of March, 1747. He married Elizabeth Simpson, of Montreal.

Possessing some influence among the Canadians, he raised a body of men under the standard of the American Congress. As their commander, he marched against Fort Chambly, seized its entire stores and garrison, and afterward accompanied General Montgomery to Quebec.

On the failure of the expedition, Colonel Livingston returned to New York, and in 1776 his men were incorporated by Congress into a regiment called the Canadian Battalion. He was at the battle of Stillwater in 1777, in 1780 was quartered in the Highlands, and served until 1781, when his regiment was reduced.⁹⁷

CATHARINE TEN BROECK LIVINGSTON (220).

She was born on the second of November, 1755, and baptized twelve days later in the Dutch Church of New York City.

During her childhood the family resided in Montreal, and when they returned to New York, Catharine remained with her married sister Annatje (217), then Mrs. Jacob Jordan, of Montreal, until the completion of her education. Shortly following her return to the family home at Stillwater, she was taken to Boston by a French lady, whose praises are still sung by the descendants, although her name is only a surmise. During this visit, at a ball given in that city in honor of Lafayette, Catharine met young Doctor Willard, whom she afterward married.

Elias Willard was born on the seventeenth of January, 1756, at Harvard, Massachusetts, a small town not far from Concord. His ancestors had been men of note in the early days of New England history.

From his own journal, now the property of a great-granddaughter, one is very fortunate in obtaining glimpses of the epochs in the life and time of Elias Willard as well as of his wife. One of the most vivid pictures is given under date of April, 1775, wherein is described his pilgrimage to the battle-field of Lexington on the day following the contest. He was then studying medicine, and when his course was completed he was appointed surgeon in the army, and served throughout the war. Part of the time he was stationed at the Boston Hospital, and doubtless it was at that period the young people first met. In regard to his marriage he writes: "In the year 1778, July the eighth, I was married to Catharine Ten Broeck Livingston, and immediately thereafter visited Albany and the country to the northward."

It seems probable Catharine remained near her paternal home, as her husband purchased an estate at Stillwater and resided there after the close of the war, for some time. In 1785 they moved to Canada for a while, and at this period is written the following:

"The time of our arrival in Montreal was June the seventeenth, 1785. A melancholy accident deprived us of one of our children, named Sarah Ten Eyck, about four years old. Depression of spirits, occasioned by this and several other circumstances, rendered my wife inconsolable, and she wished much to return to Stillwater."

They removed finally to Albany, retaining the place at Stillwater as a summer residence, and Doctor Willard makes this note of the change: "In the year 1790 I purchased the place I now live upon from General Abraham Ten Broeck for three thousand dollars." The house is situated on Broadway, next to the Fourth Presbyterian Church. North Pearl Street was not then opened through.

Catharine Ten Broeck Willard died here on the twenty-sixth of January, 1827, and the death of her husband followed in less than two months, on the twentieth of March. They are buried in Albany Rural Cemetery, where children and children's children rest near them.

An ivory miniature of Doctor Willard is owned by a descendant, Mrs. Augustus Gillinder, of New York.

CATHARINE LIVINGSTON (224).

Baptized the twenty-fifth of August, 1745. She married in her nineteenth year Stephen Van Rensselaer, the seventh Patroon of Rensselaerwyck and proprietor of the manor.

They had been married less than six years when Stephen Van Rensselaer died, leaving his wife with three children. His will, made on September the seventh, 1769, was recorded the following year in the New York office.

Catharine, after having duplicated the years of her wedded life in widowhood, married for her second husband Dominic Eilardus Westerlo. He was a native of Holland, but was called when only twenty-two years of age to the Dutch Church in Albany, where his ministry was one of unusual ability and success.

Catharine lived to see her children occupy positions of wide influence and trust. She died the seventeenth of April, 1810.

DIRCK TEN BROECK (245).

Dirck, the eldest child and only son of General Abraham Ten Broeck, was born on the third of November, 1765. He married, at the age of twenty, Cornelia Stuyvesant, who was three years younger — the daughter of Petrus Stuyvesant and Margaret Livingston.

He had the good fortune to belong to the first generation of patriots, with their enthusiasm not to a province, but to a nation. His social and political position was well assured, both by the family name he bore and the confidence which his father continued to merit. Thus his life opened with every promise.

He had studied law, and in 1796 was elected Member of Assembly from Albany County.⁹⁸ In 1798 he was appointed Speaker of the House of Assembly, and for three sessions his polished diction and eloquent power were felt in the deliberations of that body. When Mrs. Margaret Stuyvesant Gibson (457) died at Waterford, N. Y., on the twenty-second of December, 1873, the Troy Whig published the following:

Her father, Dirck Ten Broeck, was speaker of the Assembly when John Jay was Governor, in 1796, 1798, and 1800. Some of the old residents of Albany yet well remember when Speaker Ten Broeck rode to the capitol in his coach-and-four, with as much dignity as the Chancellor of England.

A lithograph, or copper-plate, was executed at this period, which represents the men foremost in the State government of those days. A copy is bound with the fourth volume of the "Documentary History of New York," and there is also a facsimile print of the group in the State Library at Albany. The plate of Dirck Ten Broeck here given is reproduced from this.

Under the will of his father, in 1810, he received lands that had continued in the Ten Broeck family for several generations, but his circumstances made it a necessity for him to practise law, which he did in New York City. Owing to financial difficulties, it had been necessary to part with some personal property, and a set of very handsome china, bearing the entwined monogram of himself and wife, is still prized by those who are not descendants.

His great-granddaughter, Miss Gibson, of New York, possesses his seal. It is of silver, oval in shape, and in size about an inch by three-quarters of an inch. On one side the initials "D. T. B." are surmounted by a horse's head unbridled, and the reverse is the coat-of-arms and crest, with the motto, "Sustineo." Mrs. Edward Ten Broeck, of Chicago, owns some very interesting relics belonging to this branch of the family.

The family of children born to Dirck Ten Broeck and his wife was an unusually large one; in the record below are given the names of twelve, and to this must be added five more, who died in earliest infancy.

Cornelia Stuyvesant Ten Broeck died at Trenton, N. J., the twenty-fourth of February, 1825; her husband survived her more than seven years, and died in December, 1832.

JACOB TEN BROECK (264).

The Will of Jacob Ten Broeck, made at Clermont (now Germantown), under date of February the third, 1829, and proved at Hudson, N. Y., June the eleventh, the same year, adds one more link to the interest that must always center in the ancient Bible of Wessel Ten Broeck, and the portrait of the ancestor, Jacob Ten Broeck (see plates on page 39 and 61), the prized heirlooms of generations, in the direct line from son to son.

An extract from the Will best shows the value then placed upon them :

Item. I give and bequeath unto my grandson, Jacob Wessel . . . the old Bible. It is my particular request that my daughter, Helen, shall have it in care until my grandson, Jacob Wessel, shall attain the age of twenty-one years.

He then devises the portrait of his grandfather to the same grandson, and adds, "It is my particular request that my son Jacob shall have it in care for my grandson, Jacob Wessel, until he attain the age of twenty-one years." By this provision Jacob Wessel Ten Broeck (770) became the owner.

There perhaps were times when the full value of the book and its records was only partly appreciated; as it is said by one of the family, he recalls the time when the heavy volume was placed upon his tiny dress-skirt, that he might not wander far from under the maternal hand.

The book needs only to be weighed in the hands one moment to realize what a restraining factor it must have been!

LEONARD W. TEN BROECK.
From the Oil-Portrait of 1832.

From early manhood his interest as a patriot and citizen was shown by his upright and useful life. The confidence he inspired was manifested by the honors put upon him by the people. He belonged to the State Militia, and was advanced to the rank of Major-General. He served as a member of the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly in 1832, from Columbia County, and later was appointed Sheriff of the county.

He married on the eleventh of October, 1820, Helen, the daughter of Walter Tryon Livingston. She was a member of the Dutch Church, and the good Christian lives of both were "clean and blameless amongst men."

The portraits, painted by Phillips in 1832, are owned by their son Mr. W. T. L. Ten Broeck of Rhinebeck, New York.

His death occurred in the prime of life, cutting off a career of great influence. His wife outlived him less than four years. They are buried in the family cemetery at Clermont, and the stones bear these inscriptions:

Leonard W. Ten Broeck.

Died January 24, 1852, aged 54 years, 11 mos. and 10 days.

Thou art gone to the grave, but we will not deplore thee,
Though sorrow and darkness encompass the tomb;
The Saviour has passed through its portals before thee,
And the lamp of his love is thy guide through the gloom.

Helen,

Wife of Leonard W. Ten Broeck.

Died September 21, 1855.

Aged 59 years, 4 mos. and 18 days.

ELIZA H. TEN BROECK (360).

She was the only daughter of William Ten Broeck, of New Brunswick. She married first, in that city on the twenty-ninth of October, 1809, Ralph Voorhees Beekman. After residing there a number of years, they removed to Flatbush, L. I. Here her husband died on January the thirtieth, 1833; and after a widowhood of a number of years she married into the well-known Schoonmaker family, her husband being Michael, son of the Rev. Martinus Schoonmaker. She outlived her second husband twenty-one years, and died on the thirtieth of December, 1866.

She was preëminently a type of the generation to which she belonged, and although she had no children, she possessed the charm of manner and brightness of mind that attracted to her home the younger members of her own family as well as a wide circle of friends.

Her will, made on March the thirteenth, 1851, was proven at Brooklyn the thirtieth of March, 1867. The eighth item of this is as follows:

I give and bequeath to my cousins, Mrs. Jane G. Woodward and Mrs. Sarah W. Forman, the portraits or oil paintings of my great-grand Parents, to be divided by themselves. And I bequeath the family coat-of-arms to my cousin Mrs. Sarah W. Forman.

EMMA TEN BROECK (367).

Emma, the second daughter of Peter Ten Broeck, of Readington (190), married in her twenty-fifth year John, the son of Samuel Runk, and Margaret Snyder.

At the time of her marriage she went to Kingwood, in the upper part of Hunterdon County, New Jersey, where her husband's family resided. Here the public life of John Runk commenced, when he was made a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders in 1825, which position he held for eight years. He was elected sheriff of the county in 1836, and served three years. In 1844 he was elected member of Congress, and four years later, in the position of presidential elector, he cast his vote for General Zachary Taylor for President. In 1850 he was nominated for Governor of New Jersey, but failed to be elected owing to a small adverse majority.

On the twenty-fifth of November, 1848, Emma Ten Broeck Runk died at Kingwood, leaving a family of seven sons and three daughters. She had been their ideal, and the harmony and beauty of her daily life were a legacy to each of them in all the years to come.

In 1854 Hon. John Runk removed to Lambertville, New Jersey. He was here elected a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and was the Director for two years. He was a charter member of the Society of Free Masons, and filled the position of Treasurer for many years.

He was a man of fine physique, eminently endowed with social qualities. His knowledge of men, generous hospitality, and above all true nobility of character caused him to be highly esteemed by the community at large.

His death occurred at Lambertville on the twenty-second of September, 1872.

JACOB TEN BROECK (475).

He was born in Clermont (now Germantown), Columbia County, N. Y., on the thirteenth of May, 1800. Here he grew to the age of manhood, and remained until 1844, when he removed to the town of Greenport, in the same county. After living there for two years he gave the farm to one of his sons, and took up his residence in the city of Hudson.

He at once became active in the affairs of the city. He was a charter-director of the Farmers' National Bank of Hudson, and outlived all those with whom he was so associated, serving continuously in the capacity of director throughout his life.

In 1862 he represented the First Assembly District of the County of Columbia in the State Legislature. In 1863 and 1864 he was mayor of Hudson, and owing to the Civil War had an unusually responsible and laborious administration, the duties of which he performed with the ability and honor that always characterized him as a public official.⁹⁹

He had, throughout his life, been industrious and enterprising, and by the application of these qualities to business, he secured an honorable reputation and a competency.

From early manhood he was an exemplary Christian. At Clermont his home was the center for ministerial hospitality — an open house for every good cause. He ever maintained the same spirit of charity, and was a constant contributor to the Reformed Dutch Church, of which he was a loyal son. He served as elder, both in Germantown and Hudson, as long as his strength permitted.

About 1840 he was captain of militia in Clermont, and the "general training days," with their bright military trappings, were festive and memorable occasions.

Jacob Ten Broeck died in Hudson, on the twenty-fourth of March, 1883. He had married at St. John's, Red Hook, on the sixth of November, 1821, Anna, the daughter of Henry Benner and Catharine Pitcher. The Benner family were of ancient lineage in Upper Bavaria, honored for brave deeds in the days of the crusades.

The portraits of Jacob Ten Broeck and his wife, painted by Phillips in 1834, are owned by their daughter, Miss Christina Catharine Ten Broeck of Hudson.

This branch of the family represents one of the rare instances in our country in which the name "homestead" stands for the property that has been continuously in the line, from father to son, for eight generations. Part of the tract of six hundred acres purchased of Robert Livingston by Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck (3), while a merchant of Albany, is now the home of Jacob Ten Broeck's grandson. Unfortunately, part of the original purchase was taken from the lawful owners, in those troublous times when Great Britain demanded taxes from a people who purposed to govern themselves.

LENA (HELEN) TEN BROECK (476).

Helen Ten Broeck was born at Germantown, New York, on September the eighth, 1803. On the twentieth of September, 1836, she became the wife of Rev. Thomas K. Lape, then pastor of the Lutheran Church at Athens. She died in less than four years afterward, and left no children. Her portrait, painted by Phillips in 1834,—two years before her marriage,—is still in the home of her childhood at North Germantown, New York.

CATHARINE MARIA TEN BROECK (477).

Born on the twenty-sixth of July, 1805, she married on November the first, 1826, William Henry De Witt, the fourth son of John I. De Witt, of "The Embocht," Greene County, New York, whose ancestors had been eminent in public affairs in Holland.

William H. De Witt's early life was spent upon his father's farm, and he attended the schools nearest at hand. Possessed of great mental aptitude, his parents sent him to Rutgers College, New Jersey. After the college course he entered upon the study of law, but not finding this congenial he relinquished it, and returned to the farm.

Shortly after, he married Catharine M. Ten Broeck. She was a woman of good judgment, amiable, unselfish, and conscientious — one who had friends in every circle. In 1830 they purchased the Seth Ten Broeck farm at Germantown, adjoining that of Jacob Ten Broeck (475).

Possessed of a keen intellect and of untiring energy,

William H. De Witt was upright and fearless. He was politically active, and was regarded as a wise party leader, but was never induced to accept any public office of importance. He was a close and trusted friend of Martin Van Buren, De Witt Clinton (who was also a relative), and others prominent in affairs of the State.

He died on the twenty-fifth of March, 1886. After his death, Catharine Ten Broeck De Witt frequently spent the winters with her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Carhart, in Brooklyn, and her death occurred there on the twenty-seventh of March, 1896. They are both buried in the hallowed ground of the old churchyard at Germantown, New York.

The portraits painted in 1834 by Phillips are now in possession of their daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Hover, of Germantown.

Children of Catharine M. Ten Broeck (477) and William H. De Witt.

- 778 I JACOB TEN BROECK, born May 29, 1828; died at Milwaukee, Wis., February 3, 1876; married in Brooklyn, N. Y., October 23, 1851, Juliet Louise May, born May 8, 1831, drowned by the foundering of the "Ironsides" off Grand Haven, Mich., September 15, 1873.
- 779 II MARY JANE, born at Catskill, N. Y., March 22, 1830; married at Germantown, N. Y., October 27, 1851, Benjamin Townsend Hoogland, born March 25, 1829, died at Brooklyn, September 15, 1890, son of Col. Benjamin R. Hoogland and Eliza Van Alst. He was a descendant of Sarah Rapalje, the first white child born in New Netherlands, June 9, 1625.

ANTHONY EDGAR BURT (526).

Anthony E. Burt was the son of Catharine Ten Broeck of Claverack, and the Rev. Moses Burt, a churchman of more than usual ability. He was born at Claverack, New York, on the twelfth of July, 1812, and in November, 1846, married Laura A. Jarvis.

He had chosen the ministry as his vocation, but his health failing, he was obliged to abandon it. He then went to Rensselaerville, N. Y., where for many years he conducted a school, well known for its high character and thoroughness. By example and precept, he stimulated his pupils to do their best.

He died on the ninth of September, 1886, and was buried from the Episcopal Church, of which he had been a communicant for more than half a century.

Child of Anthony E. Burt (526) and Laura A. Jarvis.

869 I MARY FRANCES, born January 29, 1854. .

ANTHONY TEN BROECK (529).

The Rev. Anthony Ten Broeck, D. D., was a presbyter in the Episcopal Church, some time rector of Grace Church, Newark, the Church of St. James the Less, Philadelphia, and finally of Eatontown, N. J.; but he was, above all, an educator. Early in his ministry he commenced a boys' school in Orange, N. J. He was for a time the head of Burlington College, and was the founder of the Bishop Bowman Institute for Young Ladies, in Pittsburg.

He was a man of strong will and firm purpose, of fine literary tastes and a wide range of study.

The last few years of his life were spent quietly in the small parish near the sea. He died on the twenty-second of September, 1880, and within the walls of St. Luke's Church, New York, where he had received ordination, he was buried in the family vault.

PETER TEN BROECK RUNK (645).

He was born in Kingwood, N. J., on the sixteenth of April, 1818. His early manhood was passed in helping forward the various industries on the family property, which were quite extensive, and included mills as well as farm lands.

Ten Broeck Runk, as he was familiarly called, married on June the fourth, 1845, Fanny Barcroft, the eldest daughter of Ambrose Barcroft, Jr. In the spring of 1850 they removed to Armstrong County, Pa., where they resided until the death of Peter Ten Broeck Runk, which occurred March thirty-first, 1860. This plate is copied from a daguerreotype which was taken in March, 1853.

He was never prominent in public affairs, but was deeply interested in the American, or "Know-Nothing" party, which advocated the control of the Government by native citizens.

RICHARD TEN BROECK (vide page 99).

It seems proper that the name and sketch of Richard Ten Broeck, the noted Kentuckian, should find a place in the records of the family and generation to which he belongs.

It has, so far, proved impossible to trace his continuous line of descent, although he wrote thus of himself:

My maternal grandfather, Henry Bicker of Philadelphia, was an officer with Washington during the Revolution, while my paternal grandfather, Col. Dirck Ten Broeck, was likewise a Revolutionary officer, although not attached to Washington's staff. I was born in Albany, N. Y., where my early boyhood was passed and I received my education. In 1829 I became a cadet at West Point. After leaving there I spent several years in the South, where my racing career began, which continued, with occasional breaks, until 1877, when I retired entirely.

The family trait of love for and pride in fine horses reached an unusual development in his case. From boyhood to old age, his ambitions were bound up in the events of the turf. His name was well known in Canada and England, as well as throughout the United States.

Late in life he married the widow of H. D. Newcomb of Louisville, Ky., but an unfortunate temperament separated them. He then built himself a home at Menlo Park, N. J., which he named "The Hermitage." Here he died in the summer of 1892, in probably the eighty-fifth year of his age.¹⁰⁰

 (Page 8.) ³ Original Rec. of the Kingston and Albany Dutch Churches. Note.—The relationship of Cornelia Ten Broeck (5), stated on page eight, coincides with the opinion of Mr. C. H. Van Gaasbeek, Jr.; see reference following. The original papers of the legal proceedings of the Kingston Church authorities against Dom. Van den Bosch are still in existence. The contents of these cast a shade of doubt upon this opinion. While these papers establish nothing, yet the inference might be that the wife of Laurentius Van den Bosch was the daughter of Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, instead of his sister. In that case the marriage of Cornelia Ten Broeck (9) to Johannes Wynkoop in 1696, was a second alliance.

NOTE

To find your ancestry in this arrangement of families, refer to the page indicated for your own name. On the head-line of your family will be found your parents' names. Note the number found on this line, and turn back until this appears as a marginal number. Your grandparents' names will then be found on the head-line. Following the same plan you will find the line of ascent. In case the line of descent is being traced, and both parents belong to the Ten Broeck family, the father's line has been made the direct one.

In all cases where the surname has been changed through marriage, the maiden name alone will be found in the index, with the married name in parenthesis following.
